

881–887 Broadway

The Palimpsest of a Metropolitan Corner — 881–887 Broadway / 113–115 Fifth Avenue / 9–13 East 18th Street

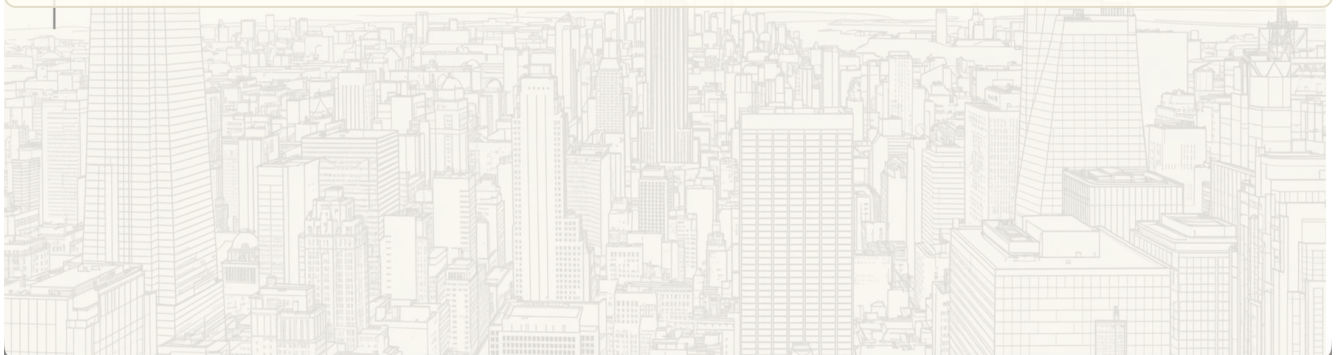

Every previously italicized phrase is highlighted and colour-coded by source. Where the source page is on file, clicking the highlight opens the scan.

COLOUR KEY — ONE COLOUR PER SOURCE · sources with a page scan are marked ↗

- | | |
|---|--|
| ■ Haswell, Reminiscences of New York by an Octogenarian , 1923 p. 110 (2) ↗ | ■ Stokes, The Iconography of Manhattan Island Volume Three , 1918 p. 930 (1) ↗ |
| ■ Culyer, A Brief History of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church , 1877 pp. 1, 8, 14 (7) ↗ | ■ Patterson, Fifth Avenue The Best Address , 1998 p. 49 (1) ↗ |
| ■ Lockwood, Manhattan Moves Uptown , 1976 p. 301 (1) ↗ | ■ Brown, Fifth Avenue Old and New , 1924 p. 36 (2) ↗ |
| ■ Perris, 1853 Perris Maps p. 56 (2) ↗ | ■ Dripps, 1867 Dripps Plan p. 7 (2) ↗ |
| ■ Tauranac, Essential New York , 1979 p. 42 (8) ↗ | ■ Young & Meyers, Adventures in Old New York , 2016 p. 259 (5) ↗ |
| ■ Boyer, Manhattan Manners , 1985 p. 96 (4) ↗ | ■ Hennessey, Fifth Avenue , 2022 p. 43 (6) ↗ |
| ■ AIA, AIA Edition 3 , 1988 p. 187 (2) ↗ | ■ White & Willensky, AIA Edition 1 , 1968 p. 94 (1) |
| ■ Gayle & Gillon, Cast Iron Architecture , 1974 p. 164 (3) ↗ | ■ Brown, Valentine's Manual 1921 , 1921 p. 99 (3) ↗ |
| ■ Finney, Time and Again , 1970 p. 179 (7) ↗ | ■ Robinson, 1885 Robinsons Atlas p. 15 (2) ↗ |
| ■ Bromley, 1897 Bromleys Atlas p. 19 (1) ↗ | ■ G W Bromley & Co, 1916 Atlas of the Borough of Manhattan p. 54 (2) ↗ |
| ■ Bromley, 1930 Land Book of the Borough of Manhattan p. 53 (2) ↗ | ■ Bromley, 1955 Manhattan Land Book p. 43 (2) ↗ |
| ■ Gerdts, Impressionist New York , 1994 p. 60 (4) ↗ | ■ Wolfe, New York 15 Walking Tours , 2003 p. 248 (2) ↗ |
| ■ Trow, Trows New York City Directory , 1865 p. 1025 (1) ↗ | ■ Francis, Architects in Practice New York City , 1979 p. 33 (1) ↗ |
| ■ Frank, Where to Find It Buy It Eat It In New York , 1980 pp. 25, 359, 522 (4) ↗ | ■ Jackson, The Encyclopedia of New York , 2010 p. 55 (1) ↗ |
| ■ Persky & Campbell, Big Apple Street Smart , 1992 p. 83 (1) ↗ | ■ Reeves, The Worldwide Guide to Movie Locations , 2001 p. 242 (1) ↗ |
| ■ Murphy, Murph Guide Closed Bars , 2023 p. 15 (1) | |

AUDIO — 881-887 BROADWAY | BRICK CAKE 34 min 58 s

Audio track — playable in the HTML version of this document.

THE PALIMPSEST OF A METROPOLITAN CORNER

I. THE LEASEHOLD GENESIS AND THE ALCHEMY OF LAND VALUE

The genealogy of this parcel commences not in the clamor of commerce but in the quietude of ecclesiastical devotion—and, antecedent to both, in the humble instrument of the ground lease. Within the mnemonic reservoir of an octogenarian's recollections, we discover that (Ex-Mayor Daniel F. Tiemann's father and uncle leased twenty-one lots on Twenty-third Street near Broadway at $3.00 per annum. They had previously leased on Fifth Avenue, Nineteenth and Twentieth streets, sixty lots at $50.00 per year.) These were speculative holdings in a precinct still in the throes of self-definition, and their pecuniary appreciation would prove nothing short of meteoric, for (In 1840 a portion of the lots leased by them, 1820, on Fifth Avenue between Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets, was sold for $27,000, and Arnold & Constable in 1868 paid $375,000 for them.)

II. THE PEREGRINATION OF A CONGREGATION

Yet antecedent to the arrival of the mercantile aristocracy, it was the congregants who consecrated this ground. The sanctuary destined to lend the corner its earliest civic identity had itself undertaken a protracted northward peregrination through the burgeoning metropolis. As the antiquarian topographer meticulously recorded, (Then called | "Duane St. Church." Congr. removed to S. E. cor. Fifth Ave. and 19th St. 1852; thenceforward known as Fifth Avenue Presby. Ch. (q. v.)—King's Handbook, 366.) The impetus behind this migration recapitulated the very forces that had earlier dislodged the flock from Cedar Street, for, as the chronicler of the parish observed, (The same reasons that made it necessary to remove from Cedar street, operated with greater urgency to demand another change of locality.) The centrifugal drift of its membership toward the fashionable uptown wards proved decisive, since (Some of the members of the church, who had removed to the upper part of the city, had commenced efforts to build a church for their accommodation and for others who were disposed to join them.) The scheme crystallized amid a season of collective resolve, whereupon (In the fall of 1850 a proposition was made to the Duane street church to sell their edifice, and to unite in the enterprise, and give a call to their late pastor. This plan was adopted with great unanimity, the call was made and accepted, and measures were immediately taken to procure a site and erect a church.)

III. THE CONSECRATION, THE DIVINE, AND THE DIASPORA

The ceremonies of installation and dedication ensued in due and solemn course. As the parochial historian faithfully attests, (On the 12th of November, 1851, Rev. James W. Alexander, D.D., was installed pastor of the Duane street church by the Presbytery of New York. The congregation met for public worship in the chapel of the University until the dedication of the new edifice on the corner of Fifth Avenue and Nineteenth street, which took place December 19, 1852, and the corporate name was changed.) The fiscal footing of this new house of worship was, from its very inception, one of enviable solvency, inasmuch as (the building was erected and occupied for the first time in December, 1852, and the pews were sold, realizing a sum sufficient to pay all the cost.) Grief, too, inscribed itself upon the annals, for (Rev. Dr. Alexander was removed by death on the 31st of July, 1859, the State of Virginia, whither he had gone for the benefit of his health.)

The architectural provenance and subsequent vicissitudes of this edifice were singularly extraordinary. As the discerning historian of the avenue elucidates, (The Filth Avenue Presbyterian Church, which counted many Madison Square residents among its congregation, was built on the southeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Nineteenth Street in 1852-53: the architect was Leopold Eidlitz, who designed other religious structures in the city. The subsequent history of the church was unusual: in 1875 it was sold at auction and presented by die buyer to the Central Presbyterian Church, which dismantled the building and re-erected it again on West Fifty-seventh Street.) A complementary survey of the thoroughfare corroborates the precise moment of exodus, recording that (Fifth Avenue Presbyterian, which had been located at the southeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Nineteenth Street since 1852, moved to the building it still occupies, at the northwest corner of Fifth Avenue and Fifty-fifth Street, in 1875.) A solitary lithographic caption enshrines the date above the image of its successor: (Image Caption: FIFTH AVENUE CHURCH erected 1875.)

IV. A GAZETTEER OF THE GENTEEL

The very register that memorialized the sanctuary likewise preserved a comprehensive inventory of the patrician households that flanked the avenue—a veritable social cartography of the era's beau monde: (1—Miss Frances A. Graham's school for girls (she succeeded Miss Lucy M. Green); 37 —Grosvenor House, northeast corner of 10th Street; 39—George N. Miller; 41—Mrs. David S. Kennedy; 47 Mrs. Lead Hawley; 49 William W. Parkin ; 51—Eli White; 53 James Lenox; 55—John Fishbee Sheafe; 57--Dr. James Lenox Banks; 81 John Brooks; Daniel Parish, southeast corner of 16th Street; 87—Dr. Robert G. Remsen; 99—Robert Lenox Kennedy.) Within the selfsame compendium, the sanctuary was noted with laconic precision amid the brownstone establishments: (Fifth Avenue Church (Dr. John Hall), southeast corner of 19th Street, afterwards moved to 55th Street and Fifth Avenue.)

V. THE DISTRICT RENDERED IN CARTOGRAPHIC INK

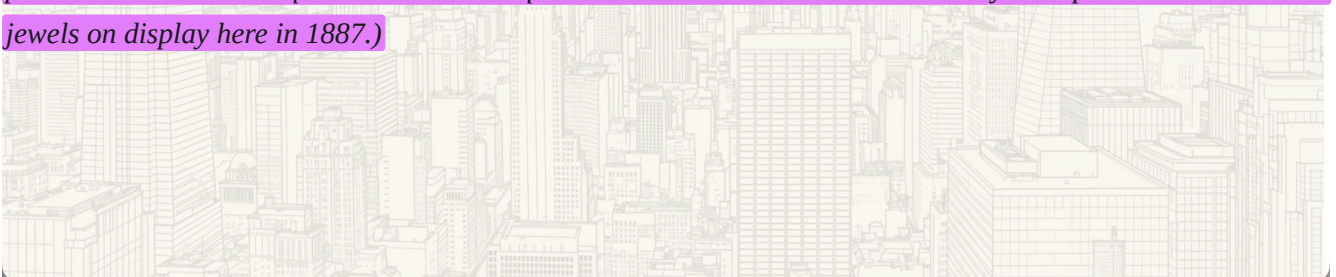

The mid-century surveys apprehended this precinct in the very throes of metamorphosis, its fabric yet entangled with domestic dwellings and modest shopfronts. Upon the Eighteenth Street parcel, the cartographers registered the coexistence of two houses of worship amid a heterogeneous congeries of construction: (In the 1853 Perris Maps, on 9-13 East 18th Street, there is written 'Episcopal Church, Presbyterian church' as well as reference to 11 Structures; Framed dwellings, Framed Store first class, Brick or Stone Store second class...) Along the Broadway frontage, the parcels presented an equally variegated assemblage: (In the 1853 Perris Maps, on 881-887 Broadway, there is reference to 4 structures; Brick or Stone dwellings fourth class (shingle roof) with stores under, Brick or Stone dwellings first class (slate or metal roof & coped) with stores under, Framed dwellings with stores under and Framed Extension, Framed dwellings with stores under and Framed Extension.) By the epoch of the Dripps Plan, the density of habitation had grown positively prodigious along the block: (In the 1867 Dripps Plan, on 881-887 Broadway, there is reference to 14 structures; Building, Building, Building...), while the Eighteenth Street lot comprised (3 structures; Building, Building, Building.)

VI. THE APOTHEOSIS OF LADIES' MILE

Thereafter descended the merchant princes, and with them the wholesale transfiguration of the district. The architectural essayist situated the emporium within the grand dialectic of urban succession, discerning that (Neighborhoods change. What was originally a residential area becomes yesterday's first-class shopping center, today's commercial district, and maybe the site of tomorrow's renaissance. By the 1870s this area was entering the second stage of that urban progression.) He proceeded to elaborate: (Moving into it were New York's largest stores, stores that had started as small shops in lower Manhattan. By 1000 this uptown migration would be complete. with New York's finest stores lining Broadway solidly from Eighth to Twenty-third streets, and Sixth Avenue from Fourteenth to Twenty-third streets. Since this was the cream of New York's shopping, and since women were reputedly the principal patrons, the stretches became known as Ladies' Mile.)

The competitive stratagems of the period were rendered with vivid particularity, for (Competing retailers, however, chose to leapfrog the "Iron Palace" at its 9th Street location and follow the growth of the city north, clustering themselves farther up Broadway.) The animating cause resided in the pedigree of the avenue's inhabitants, inasmuch as (Elegant and powerful Fifth Avenue set the rules for the neighborhood's retail establishments. Lined with the townhouses of the rich and famous, its wealthy residents demanded shopping options close by. Soon Broadway between Union and Madison Squares offered a fine variety of dry goods stores, and developed into a prim and proper "carriage trade," whose customers always (at least in theory) rolled up in style.) Within the selfsame disquisition, the neighboring purveyors of gemstones executed their own translocation, for (Tiffany & Co. moved its fine emporium, called the "palace of jewels" — you get the point — to its new headquarters at Union Square West and 15th Street in 1870. They even put the French crown jewels on display here in 1887.)

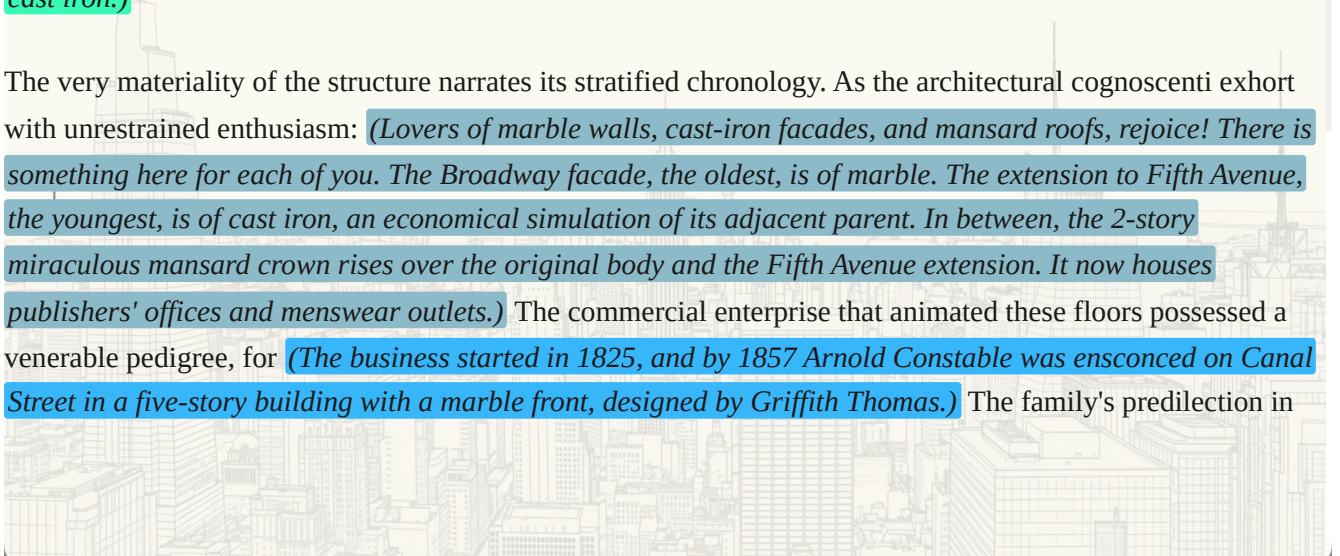

VII. WHEN MAMMON SUPPLANTED THE SACRED

The ascendancy of the mercantile district was purchased at the expense of venerable ecclesiastical institutions, for, as the theorist of commercial form proclaimed, (American commercial architecture adopted a functional form: beauty was found in perfect mechanical efficiency.) As that same historian meticulously chronicled, (The real inroads of commercialization above Fourteenth Street were felt, however, when Renwick's Church of the Puritans was torn down in 1869 and replaced by yet another Kellum-designed cast-iron building, the five-story Tiffany Building, at the southwest corner of Fifteenth Street and Union Square.) It was into precisely this milieu that the great dry-goods palace arose. As the record attests, (Arnold Constable and Company opened a new store in 1869 in a marble-fronted five-story building (881 -883 Broadway) on the west side of Broadway between Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets, designed by Griffith Thomas (fig. 117). In 1873 Thomas added a huge two-story mansard roof for extra floor space and in 1877 a cast-iron replica of the Broadway facade was designed, again by Thomas, for the new Fifth Avenue extension.) In the very annum that Arnold Constable and Company broke ground, a rival house followed suit, for (Lord and Taylor moved into a highly ornate five-story castiron building, designed by James Giles, on the southwest corner of Broadway and Twentieth Street at 901 Broadway.)

VIII. THE EDIFICE AARON ARNOLD RAISED

The lineage of the firm extends into an even remoter antiquity, as the modern connoisseur relates: (Aaron Arnold opened his first store in Lower Manhattan in 1825; the company name changed to Arnold Constable & Company following the marriage of his daughter to James Mansell Constable, an employee who became a partner in 1842. In 1868 with the emergence of Union Square as retail center, the firm hired Griffith Thomas to build a new store at 881-887 Broadway. Business was brisk, and in 1876 the store was extended west along 19th Street to Fifth Avenue. This facade echoes that of the main front on Broadway except that it is executed in cast iron.)

The very materiality of the structure narrates its stratified chronology. As the architectural cognoscenti exhort with unrestrained enthusiasm: (Lovers of marble walls, cast-iron facades, and mansard roofs, rejoice! There is something here for each of you. The Broadway facade, the oldest, is of marble. The extension to Fifth Avenue, the youngest, is of cast iron, an economical simulation of its adjacent parent. In between, the 2-story miraculous mansard crown rises over the original body and the Fifth Avenue extension. It now houses publishers' offices and menswear outlets.) The commercial enterprise that animated these floors possessed a venerable pedigree, for (The business started in 1825, and by 1857 Arnold Constable was ensconced on Canal Street in a five-story building with a marble front, designed by Griffith Thomas.) The family's predilection in building materials was one of deliberate aesthetic conviction, since (Constable probably felt limestone and brick to be more imposing architecturally than the then currently popular cast iron. Note the steep two-storied mansarded roof.)

IX. THE HEROIC DIADEM OF THE MANSARD

The mansard roof invited comparison to the macabre fancies of a later imagination, for it constituted (a roof that surely could have been the inspiration for the best of cartoonist Charles Addams's designs (its only serious competition left in New York is the old Gilsey House on Broadway at Twenty-ninth Street).) The commerce transacted within its walls was of prodigious volume, the establishment being (Especially famous for its mourning clothes, it did a huge business in dry goods, carpets, and upholstery on its five selling floors. The cast-iron wing on Fifth Avenue housed the wholesale business, and the sixth and seventh floors were devoted to manufacturing.) The magnificence of the mansard was extolled anew in a parallel encomium: (With its elaborate mansard roof. Arnold Constable was one of the grandest stores on Ladies' Mile.)

The roof itself ascended to become the edifice's most beloved and conspicuous distinction. As the chronicler of cast-iron architecture affirms, (The heroic mansard roof is the feature that most often attracts attention to this big Victorian-looking cast-iron building that was once Arnold Constable's dry-goods store at the southeast corner of Fifth Avenue and 19th St. Its main facade, of white marble, was on Broadway at 19th St. The noted architect Griffith Thomas designed it in 1868.) The rationale underpinning the eventual cast-iron simulacrum was one of unimpeachable pragmatism, for (Arnold and his son-in-law James Constable did such a tremendous business in their new Broadway store that they expanded by extending its 19th St. side.) Subsequently, (Finally, they built all the way to Fifth Avenue and erected there in 1877 an annex for the wholesale departments.) The connoisseur's catalogue located its idiom within a transatlantic aesthetic vogue, remarking of the crown that (With its bold mansard roof and richly sculptural facade, the building is an example of American architectural taste in the decade following the Civil War when designs inspired by the Paris of Napoleon III were in vogue.)

X. THE CARRIAGE TRADE AND ITS COMPETITORS

The clientele constituted the very quintessence of the age's affluence. As the chronicler of Old New York observes, (Arnold Constable & Co. (881-887 Broadway, at 19th Street) opened its "palace of trade" in 1869, and was known for the high-end fabrics and exotic carpets that would entrance the Vanderbilts and Rockefellers.) Indeed, as the venerable manual recounts, (In 1869, just about the time A. T. Stewart opened his great retail establishment at Ninth Street, Arnold, Constable & Co. moved into the large building at Broadway and Nineteenth Street, where they remained until 1915. During this long period they enjoyed a select class of trade, popularly referred to as "carriage trade.") Though rivals laid claim to a portion of this exclusive custom,

(B. Altman & Co., Stern Bros, and Lord & Taylor had a considerable part of it, and kept the class of goods required for such a clientele, but Arnold, Constable & Co. had the lion's share.) The vitrines of the competitor upon the adjacent corner likewise elicited widespread admiration, for (Lord & Taylor's Broadway store in the 80s was one of the busiest and most attractive dry goods establishments in the city. They had a fine location at the corner of Twentieth Street, and made a special feature of dressing the large windows there with the latest styles in costumes and not infrequently millinery. These displays were so good that their fame spread beyond the confines of the city and people came long distances to see them.)

XI. A PERAMBULATION PAST THE PALACE OF WHITE MARBLE

To promenade past the emporium in its full efflorescence was to behold a veritable marvel, as one time-traveling narrator so evocatively recollected: (At Nineteenth we passed a magnificent store of white marble, and I glanced at a brass sign—one was set into the lower edge of each of the & co. Beside the long row of display windows—and it said ARNOLD CONSTABLE & CO.) He apprehended, with a novelist's acuity, the entire animate tableau of the thoroughfare, recalling that (At Broadway and Twentieth, passing Lord & Taylor's, we had to stop abruptly to let a procession of two sail past us toward the curb, a really magnificent dowager in a little flat hat tied on with a ribbon in a big bow under her chin, and a long fur-trimmed coat, and followed by a bareheaded man store manager, floorwalker?— in a morning coat, wing collar, striped pants, and obsequious smile, earning her packages, the footman of the waiting carriage leaping down to take them.) Adjacent to the marble emporium, he descried (a middle-aged woman selling toy's from a basket sat on a tiny folding campstool next to a flight of stairs.) He passed (a man in a dark-blue army overcoat, wearing a blue forage cap—the flat Civil War kind—and he was working his way upstream of the traffic flow with a wooden trayful of apples hung from a leather sling round his neck.) He remarked upon (an elderly woman selling pressed ferns from a basket; I have no idea what they were for), and upon a mutilated veteran who (had a grind organ hanging from his neck by a strap and supported by a single leg; he was turning the handle with his one arm, cranking out—I listened to be sure, and yes, it was— "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here!") Overhead, the horological monuments presided, for (We were never out of sight of one or another of the great clocks set high above the crowds on elaborate iron pedestals; only the well-off carried watches, I remembered Martin's saying; they were expensive, to be passed on to sons and grandsons after them; no Timexes here.)

XII. THE CONSTABLE PATRIMONY IN MASONRY

The mercantile fortune of the house extended its dominion to the contiguous corner, for the family had apprehended the axiom that (The dry goods trade was a lucrative one for the Constable family, and they invested their profits in real estate.) Accordingly, (In 1893 Henrietta Constable, granddaughter of Aaron Arnold, purchased the lot at the corner of Fifth Avenue and 18th Street and built 109-111 Fifth Avenue as an investment property.) This new undertaking was lauded as (a first-class building: fine materials, a carefully composed facade, and elegant understated detailing.) The structure attracted a tenancy of considerable professional distinction, for (The Constable Building was long a favored office location for architects, including Cass Gilbert. Henry Bacon. Robert Maynicke, and Schickel himself.)

XIII. THE CADASTRAL LEDGER OF THE ATLASES

The cartographic atlases charted the edifice's consolidation into a singular and monumental mass. Upon the Eighteenth Street lot, (In the 1885 Robinsons Atlas, on 9-13 East 18th Street, there is written 'Arnold Constable & Co. Dry Goods and Uphosters' as well as reference to 3 Structures; Stone building, Iron building, Brick building), whereas along Broadway, (In the 1885 Robinsons Atlas, on 881-887 Broadway, there is written 'Arnold Constable & Co. Dry Goods and Uphosters' as well as reference to 1 Structure; Stone building.) By the century's terminus, (In the 1897 Bromleys Atlas, on 881-887 Broadway, there is written 'Arnold Constable & Co Dry Goods' as well as reference to 1 Structure; 7 Story Brick building with Stone front and Iron front.) Into the ensuing century the imposing bulk persisted: (In the 1916 Atlas of the Borough of Manhattan, on 881-887 Broadway, there is reference to 1 Structure; 7 Story Brick building with Store and Elevators and 1 Story Brick Extension and 2 Story Brick Extension), while the Eighteenth Street parcel manifested (In the 1916 Atlas of the Borough of Manhattan, on 9-13 East 18th Street, there is reference to 2 structures; 5 Story Brick building with Store and Elevator and 1 Story Brick Extension, 7 Story Brick building with Store and Elevators and 1 Story Brick Extension and 2 Story Brick Extension.) In the subsequent decade, (In the 1930 Land Book of the Borough of Manhattan, on 881-887 Broadway, there is reference to 1 Structure; 7 Story Brick building with Store), while in the immediate vicinity (In the 1930 Land Book of the Borough of Manhattan, on 9-13 East 18th Street, there is reference to 3 structures; 5 Story Brick building with Store and Elevator and 1 Story Brick Extension, 1 Story Brick building with 2 Story Brick Extension, 7 Story Brick building with Store and Elevator and Fire proof building (steel construction).) At the century's meridian, (In the 1955 Manhattan Land Book, on 881-887 Broadway, there is reference to 1 Structure; 7 Story Brick or Stone or Concrete building with Store and Elevators and Fire proof building (steel construction) and 1 Story Brick or Stone or Concrete Extension and 2 Story Brick or Stone or Concrete Extension), and correspondingly (In the 1955 Manhattan Land Book, on 9-13 East 18th Street, there is reference to 1 Structure; 5 Story Brick or Stone or Concrete building with Store and Elevators and 1 Story Brick or Stone or Concrete Extension.)

XIV. THE INEXORABLE MARCH TO MIDTOWN

The dissolution of the great mercantile house upon this site formed but one episode in a citywide pattern of retreat and abandonment. As the historian of Impressionist New York observes, (By the second half of the nineteenth century Broadway from Fourteenth to Twenty-third Street was the heart of Ladies Mile.) It (was the center for hotels, theaters, galleries, and clubs, and for the major retail outlets—Brooks Brothers, Lord and Taylor Dry goods, W. J. Sloane Carpets, Arnold Constable, and many others.) As the account proceeds, (in 1914 Arnold Constable, built in 1868-69 at 881 Broadway at East Nineteenth Street, moved to Fifth Avenue near Fortieth Street), and (Lord and Taylor, completed in 1872 at 901 Broadway at Twentieth Street, moved to Thirty-eighth Street.) The most magisterial narration records the trajectory in its entirety: (In 1914, Arnold Constable continued its northward trek, joining the march to midtown and leaving behind this monumental pile. After 150 years in business, Arnold Constable closed its doors in 1975.)

XV. THE PALIMPSEST RESURRECTED

The destiny of the neighboring purveyor of carpets was chronicled in its full particularity: (As the gaslit era waned, Sloane's moved in 1912 to Fifth Avenue and 47th Street, where they remained until 1962. In a subsequent move down the avenue to 38th Street, they sold their building to discount merchandiser E. J. Korvette, acquiring the store formerly occupied by Franklin Simon; and in a late 1982 move, Sloane's abandoned their Fifth Avenue address for an adjacent smaller location farther west on 38th Street. Two years later they closed their store and moved operations to the three W. & J. Sloane suburban stores.) The very fabric of the Arnold Constable edifice, by contrast, endured to be cherished afresh, for (the present owner of the 881 Broadway store is also a rug and carpet retailer, and has restored the exterior and interior to re-create the aura of elegance of the 1880s. Find the "S" monogram on a small cast-iron shield set high on the building, as well as the date of construction in terra-cotta Roman numerals.)

The contemplative essayist apprehended the abiding potency of such structures, meditating that (Some of the buildings are gone, but many remain, and if you peel back the years of neglect, the magic of palimpsest will reveal their glories. Of them all, the building erected by Arnold Constable & Co. is one of the best preserved and certainly one of the grandest.) And of the rival structure that shared in the district's spectral grandeur, it was (given a corner tower and mansard roof that still stands today, although passersby are more likely to think it looks like a haunted Gothic mansion than a palace of anything.)

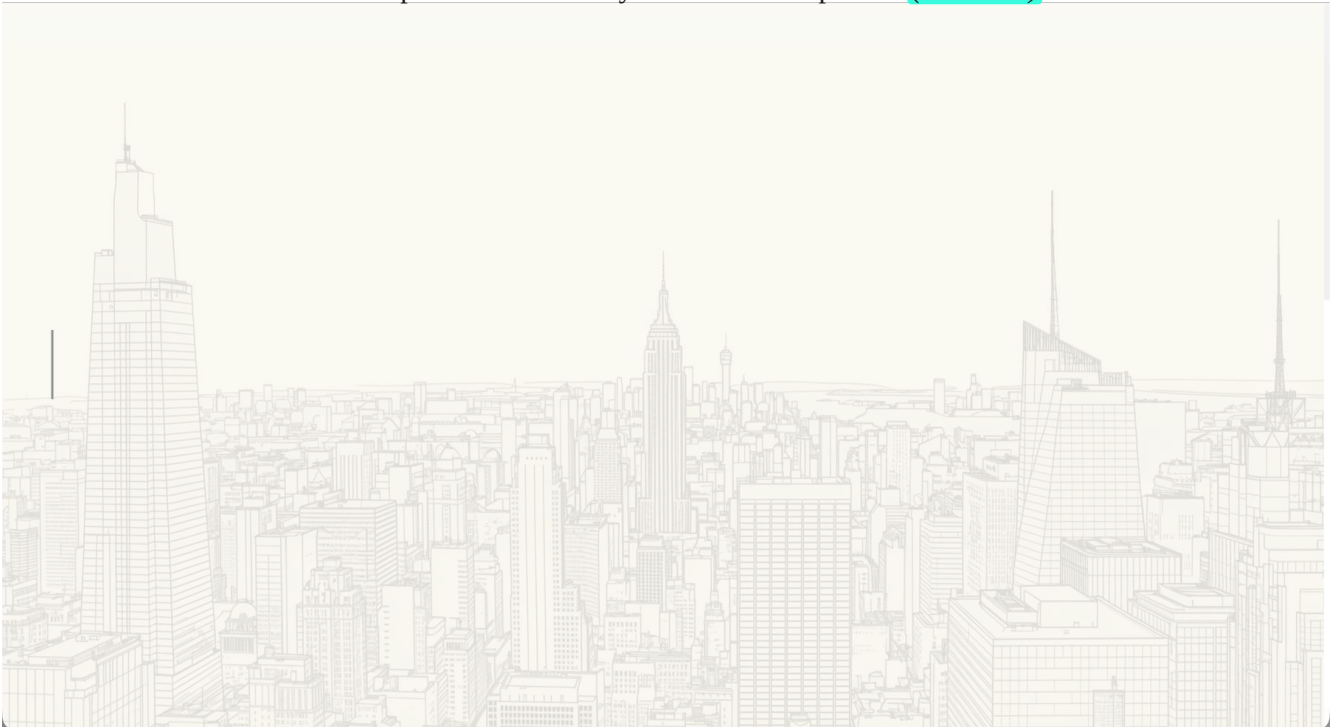

XVI. ENGRAVERS, ARCHITECTS, AND SUNDRY TENANTS OF THE RECORD

A solitary professional occupant of an adjacent address subsists within the yellowed pages of the old directories, one advertisement proclaiming: (W. G. Jackman, Portbait, Historical and Landscape Engraver, In Line Stipple and Mezzotint, 885 Broadway, Room 92, New York. Refers to D. Appleton & Co., Harper & Brothers and A. B. Barries & Co.) An architect affiliated with the block likewise materializes within a register of practitioners: (GARDINER, WILLIAM W. 1856-66 8-10 E. 19th 1867 119 Broadway 1868-9 907 Broadway 1875-6 Washington av. n. 170th 1877-9 Washington av. n. 169th 1883-91 1364 Washington av.)

In the contemporary epoch, the address at 115 Fifth Avenue accreted an entirely new constellation of occupants. It served, for an interval, as the domicile of a purveyor of intimate apparel, enumerated as (Victoria's Secret (34 E 57th St, 1240 Third Ave, 115 Fifth Ave, 565 Broadway, and other locations)), and subsequently as the seat of an architectural practice of eminent lineage, catalogued as (HLW, 115 Fifth Ave. Founded ... 1885 No. New York Architects 2008/2007 ... 65/65 Total Construction Volume (in millions) ... $700.0 No. New York Area Projects ... 135 2008 Area Projects Total Square Footage (in millions) ... 3.0 Notable New York Area Projects and Clients ... Google; Nassau County Courthouse.)

XVII. A FIRMAMENT OF NEON: THE RESTAURANT CALLED AMERICA

In our own contemporary age, the Eighteenth Street address was consecrated anew as a temple to appetite and theatrical spectacle. As the architectural guide records, ([W 10.] America (restaurant), 9 E. 18th St., bet. Broadway and Fifth Ave. 1985. MGS Architects. A grand space with a raised and skylit bar that is a stage for the restaurant-tabled audience. Here architecture is space, rather than form. Neon lances itself across the restaurant sky, a colored vibrant sculptured heaven over the pedestrian world below.) It was, in more prosaic estimation, (A big restaurant (9 E 18th St, 212/505-2110) with large portions and heaps of French fries.) It surfaced within the gastronomic gazetteers of its day beneath the rubric (FLATIRON DISTRICT/GRAMERCY PARK/LOWER BROADWAY/UNION SQUARE) as (America (9 E 18th St): American, Sunday ...87), and once more within a peripatetic street-guide as (AM-America 9 East 18th St. ☎: 505-2110 $.) It enjoyed, moreover, a cinematic afterlife, for (The Dizzy Club is the 350-seat America Restaurant 9 East 18th Street between Broadway and Fifth Avenue, northwest of Union Square once the ultimate trendy restaurant.) And in the fullness of time it was inscribed upon the melancholy roster of the departed: (America.)

CITATION CHART

Every highlighted quote, in order of appearance, correlated to its underlying source. The swatch matches the highlight colour in the text.

I. THE LEASEHOLD GENESIS AND THE ALCHEMY OF LAND VALUE

#	Verbatim Quote (abbreviated)	Source (Author, Title, Year, Page)
1	"Ex-Mayor Daniel F. Tiemann's father and uncle leased twenty-one lots on Twenty-third Street near Broadway at $3.00 per annum. They had previously leased on Fifth Avenue,..."	 Haswell, Reminiscences of New York by an Octogenarian , 1923, p. 110 [page scan]
2	"In 1840 a portion of the lots leased by them, 1820, on Fifth Avenue between Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets, was sold for $27,000, and Arnold & Constable in 1868 paid..."	 Haswell, Reminiscences of New York by an Octogenarian , 1923, p. 110 [page scan]

II. THE PEREGRINATION OF A CONGREGATION

#	Verbatim Quote (abbreviated)	Source (Author, Title, Year, Page)
3	"Then called "Duane St. Church." Congr. removed to S. E. cor. Fifth Ave. and 19th St. 1852; thenceforward known as Fifth Avenue Presby. Ch. (q. v.)—King's Handbook, 366."	 Stokes, The Iconography of Manhattan Island Volume Three , 1918, p. 930 [page scan]
4	"The same reasons that made it necessary to remove from Cedar street, operated with greater urgency to demand another change of locality."	 Culyer, A Brief History of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church , 1877, p. 8 [page scan]
5	"Some of the members of the church, who had removed to the upper part of the city, had commenced efforts to build a church for their accommodation and for others who..."	 Culyer, A Brief History of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church , 1877, p. 8 [page scan]
6	"In the fall of 1850 a proposition was made to the Duane' street church to sell their edifice, and to unite in the enterprise, and give a call to their late pastor...."	 Culyer, A Brief History of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church , 1877, p. 8 [page scan]

III. THE CONSECRATION, THE DIVINE, AND THE DIASPORA

#	Verbatim Quote (abbreviated)	Source (Author, Title, Year, Page)
7	"On the 12th of November, 1851, Rev. James W. Alexander, D.D., was installed pastor of the Duane street church by the Presbytery of New York. The congregation met for..."	 Culyer, A Brief History of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church , 1877, p. 8 [page scan]
8	"the building was erected and occupied for the first time in December, 1852, and the pews were sold, realizing a sum sufficient to pay all the cost."	 Culyer, A Brief History of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church , 1877, p. 14 [page scan]
9	"Rev. Dr. Alexander was removed by death on the 31st of July, 1859, the State of Virginia, whither he had gone for the benefit of his health."	 Culyer, A Brief History of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church , 1877, p. 8 [page scan]

#	Verbatim Quote (abbreviated)	Source (Author, Title, Year, Page)
10	"The Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, which counted many Madison Square residents among its congregation, was built on the southeast corner of Fifth Avenue and..."	 Patterson, Fifth Avenue The Best Address , 1998, p. 49 [page scan]
11	"Fifth Avenue Presbyterian, which had been located at the southeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Nineteenth Street since 1852, moved to the building it still occupies, at..."	 Lockwood, Manhattan Moves Uptown , 1976, p. 301 [page scan]
12	"Image Caption: FIFTH AVENUE CHURCH erected 1875."	 Culyer, A Brief History of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church , 1877, p. 1 [page scan]

IV. A GAZETTEER OF THE GENTEEL

#	Verbatim Quote (abbreviated)	Source (Author, Title, Year, Page)
13	"1—Miss Frances A. Graham's school for girls (she succeeded Miss Lucy M. Green); 37 —Grosvenor House, northeast corner of 10th Street; 39—George N. Miller; 41—Mrs. David..."	 Brown, Fifth Avenue Old and New , 1924, p. 36 [page scan]
14	"Fifth Avenue Church (Dr. John Hall), southeast corner of 19th Street, afterwards moved to 55th Street and Fifth Avenue."	 Brown, Fifth Avenue Old and New , 1924, p. 36 [page scan]

V. THE DISTRICT RENDERED IN CARTOGRAPHIC INK

#	Verbatim Quote (abbreviated)	Source (Author, Title, Year, Page)
15	"In the 1853 Perris Maps, on 9-13 East 18th Street, there is written 'Episcopal Church, Presbyterian church' as well as reference to 11 Structures; Framed dwellings..."	 Perris, 1853 Perris Maps , p. 56 [page scan]
16	"In the 1853 Perris Maps, on 881-887 Broadway, there is reference to 4 structures; Brick or Stone dwellings fourth class (shingle roof) with stores under, Brick or Stone..."	 Perris, 1853 Perris Maps , p. 56 [page scan]
17	"In the 1867 Dripps Plan, on 881-887 Broadway, there is reference to 14 structures; Building, Building, Building..."	 Dripps, 1867 Dripps Plan , p. 7 [page scan]
18	"3 structures; Building, Building, Building."	 Dripps, 1867 Dripps Plan , p. 7 [page scan]

VI. THE APOTHEOSIS OF LADIES' MILE

#	Verbatim Quote (abbreviated)	Source (Author, Title, Year, Page)
19	"Neighborhoods change. What was originally a residential area becomes yesterday's first-class shopping center, today's commercial district, and maybe the site of..."	 Tauranac, Essential New York , 1979, p. 42 [page scan]
20	"Moving into it were New York's largest stores, stores that had started as small shops in lower Manhattan. By 1000 this uptown migration would be complete. with New..."	 Tauranac, Essential New York , 1979, p. 42 [page scan]
21	"Competing retailers, however, chose to leapfrog the 'Iron Palace' at its 9th Street location and follow the growth of the city north, clustering themselves farther up..."	 Young & Meyers, Adventures in Old New York , 2016, p. 259 [page scan]

#	Verbatim Quote (abbreviated)	Source (Author, Title, Year, Page)
22	"Elegant and powerful Fifth Avenue set the rules for the neighborhood's retail establishments. Lined with the townhouses of the rich and famous, its wealthy residents..."	Young & Meyers, Adventures in Old New York , 2016, p. 259 [page scan]
23	"Tiffany & Co. moved its fine emporium, called the "palace of jewels" — you get the point — to its new headquarters at Union Square West and 15th Street in 1870. They..."	Young & Meyers, Adventures in Old New York , 2016, p. 259 [page scan]

VII. WHEN MAMMON SUPPLANTED THE SACRED

#	Verbatim Quote (abbreviated)	Source (Author, Title, Year, Page)
24	"American commercial architecture adopted a functional form: beauty was found in perfect mechanical efficiency."	Boyer, Manhattan Manners , 1985, p. 96 [page scan]
25	"The real inroads of commercialization above Fourteenth Street were felt, however, when Renwick's Church of the Puritans was torn down in 1869 and replaced by yet another..."	Boyer, Manhattan Manners , 1985, p. 96 [page scan]
26	"Arnold Constable and Company opened a new store in 1869 in a marble-fronted five-story building (881 -883 Broadway) on the west side of Broadway between Eighteenth and..."	Boyer, Manhattan Manners , 1985, p. 96 [page scan]
27	"Lord and Taylor moved into a highly ornate five-story castiron building, designed by James Giles, on the southwest corner of Broadway and Twentieth Street at 901..."	Boyer, Manhattan Manners , 1985, p. 96 [page scan]

VIII. THE EDIFICE AARON ARNOLD RAISED

#	Verbatim Quote (abbreviated)	Source (Author, Title, Year, Page)
28	"Aaron Arnold opened his first store in Lower Manhattan in 1825; the company name changed to Arnold Constable & Company following the marriage of his daughter to James..."	Hennessey, Fifth Avenue , 2022, p. 43 [page scan]
29	"Lovers of marble walls, cast-iron facades, and mansard roofs, rejoice! There is something here for each of you. The Broadway facade, the oldest, is of marble. The..."	AIA, AIA Edition 3 , 1988, p. 187 [page scan]
30	"The business started in 1825, and by 1857 Arnold Constable was ensconced on Canal Street in a five-story building with a marble front, designed by Griffith Thomas."	Tauranac, Essential New York , 1979, p. 42 [page scan]
31	"Constable probably felt limestone and brick to be more imposing architecturally than the then currently popular cast iron. Note the steep two-storied mansarded roof."	White & Willensky, AIA Edition 1 , 1968, p. 94

IX. THE HEROIC DIADEM OF THE MANSARD

#	Verbatim Quote (abbreviated)	Source (Author, Title, Year, Page)
32	"a roof that surely could have been the inspiration for the best of cartoonist Charles Addams's designs (its only serious competition left in New York is the old Gilsey..."	Tauranac, Essential New York , 1979, p. 42 [page scan]

#	Verbatim Quote (abbreviated)	Source (Author, Title, Year, Page)
33	"Especially famous for its mourning clothes, it did a huge business in dry goods, carpets, and upholstery on its five selling floors. The cast-iron wing on Fifth Avenue..."	 Tauranac, Essential New York , 1979, p. 42 [page scan]
34	"With its elaborate mansard roof. Arnold Constable was one of the grandest stores on Ladies' Mile."	 Tauranac, Essential New York , 1979, p. 42 [page scan]
35	"The heroic mansard roof is the feature that most often attracts attention to this big Victorian-looking cast-iron building that was once Arnold Constable's dry-goods..."	 Gayle & Gillon, Cast Iron Architecture , 1974, p. 164 [page scan]
36	"Arnold and his son-in-law James Constable did such a tremendous business in their new Broadway store that they expanded by extending its 19th St. side."	 Gayle & Gillon, Cast Iron Architecture , 1974, p. 164 [page scan]
37	"Finally, they built all the way to Fifth Avenue and erected there in 1877 an annex for the wholesale departments."	 Gayle & Gillon, Cast Iron Architecture , 1974, p. 164 [page scan]
38	"With its bold mansard roof and richly sculptural facade, the building is an example of American architectural taste in the decade following the Civil War when designs..."	 Hennessey, Fifth Avenue , 2022, p. 43 [page scan]

X. THE CARRIAGE TRADE AND ITS COMPETITORS

#	Verbatim Quote (abbreviated)	Source (Author, Title, Year, Page)
39	"Arnold Constable & Co. (881-887 Broadway, at 19th Street) opened its "palace of trade" in 1869, and was known for the high-end fabrics and exotic carpets that would..."	 Young & Meyers, Adventures in Old New York , 2016, p. 259 [page scan]
40	"In 1869, just about the time A. T. Stewart opened his great retail establishment at Ninth Street, Arnold, Constable & Co. moved into the large building at Broadway and..."	 Brown, Valentine's Manual 1921 , 1921, p. 99 [page scan]
41	"B. Altman & Co., Stern Bros, and Lord & Taylor had a considerable part of it, and kept the class of goods required for such a clientele, but Arnold, Constable & Co. had..."	 Brown, Valentine's Manual 1921 , 1921, p. 99 [page scan]
42	"Lord & Taylor's Broadway store in the 80s was one of the busiest and most attractive dry goods establishments in the city. They had a fine location at the corner of..."	 Brown, Valentine's Manual 1921 , 1921, p. 99 [page scan]

XI. A PERAMBULATION PAST THE PALACE OF WHITE MARBLE

#	Verbatim Quote (abbreviated)	Source (Author, Title, Year, Page)
43	"At Nineteenth we passed a magnificent store of white marble, and I glanced at a brass sign—one was set into the lower edge of each of the & co. Beside the long row of..."	 Finney, Time and Again , 1970, p. 179 [page scan]
44	"At Broadway and Twentieth, passing Lord & Taylor's, we had to stop abruptly to let a procession of two sail past us toward the curb, a really magnificent dowager in a..."	 Finney, Time and Again , 1970, p. 179 [page scan]
45	"a middle-aged woman selling toy's from a basket sat on a tiny folding campstool next to a flight of stairs."	 Finney, Time and Again , 1970, p. 179 [page scan]

#	Verbatim Quote (abbreviated)	Source (Author, Title, Year, Page)
46	"a man in a dark-blue army overcoat, wearing a blue forage cap—the flat Civil War kind— and he was working his way upstream of the traffic flow with a wooden trayful of..."	Finney, Time and Again , 1970, p. 179 [page scan]
47	"an elderly woman selling pressed ferns from a basket; I have no idea what they were for"	Finney, Time and Again , 1970, p. 179 [page scan]
48	"had a grind organ hanging from his neck by a strap and supported by a single leg; he was turning the handle with his one arm, cranking out—I listened to be sure, and..."	Finney, Time and Again , 1970, p. 179 [page scan]
49	"We were never out of sight of one or another of the great clocks set high above the crowds on elaborate iron pedestals; only the well-off carried watches, I remembered..."	Finney, Time and Again , 1970, p. 179 [page scan]

XII. THE CONSTABLE PATRIMONY IN MASONRY

#	Verbatim Quote (abbreviated)	Source (Author, Title, Year, Page)
50	"The dry goods trade was a lucrative one for the Constable family, and they invested their profits in real estate."	Hennessey, Fifth Avenue , 2022, p. 43 [page scan]
51	"In 1893 Henrietta Constable, granddaughter of Aaron Arnold, purchased the lot at the corner of Fifth Avenue and 18th Street and built 109-111 Fifth Avenue as an..."	Hennessey, Fifth Avenue , 2022, p. 43 [page scan]
52	"a first-class building: fine materials, a carefully composed facade, and elegant understated detailing."	Hennessey, Fifth Avenue , 2022, p. 43 [page scan]
53	"The Constable Building was long a favored office location for architects, including Cass Gilbert. Henry Bacon. Robert Maynicke, and Schickel himself."	Hennessey, Fifth Avenue , 2022, p. 43 [page scan]

XIII. THE CADASTRAL LEDGER OF THE ATLASES

#	Verbatim Quote (abbreviated)	Source (Author, Title, Year, Page)
54	"In the 1885 Robinsons Atlas, on 9-13 East 18th Street, there is written 'Arnold Constable & Co. Dry Goods and Uphosterers' as well as reference to 3 Structures; Stone..."	Robinson, 1885 Robinsons Atlas , p. 15 [page scan]
55	"In the 1885 Robinsons Atlas, on 881-887 Broadway, there is written 'Arnold Constable & Co. Dry Goods and Uphosterers' as well as reference to 1 Structure; Stone building."	Robinson, 1885 Robinsons Atlas , p. 15 [page scan]
56	"In the 1897 Bromleys Atlas, on 881-887 Broadway, there is written 'Arnold Constable & Co Dry Goods' as well as reference to 1 Structure; 7 Story Brick building with..."	Bromley, 1897 Bromleys Atlas , p. 19 [page scan]
57	"In the 1916 Atlas of the Borough of Manhattan, on 881-887 Broadway, there is reference to 1 Structure; 7 Story Brick building with Store and Elevators and 1 Story Brick..."	G W Bromley & Co, 1916 Atlas of the Borough of Manhattan , p. 54 [page scan]
58	"In the 1916 Atlas of the Borough of Manhattan, on 9-13 East 18th Street, there is reference to 2 structures; 5 Story Brick building with Store and Elevator and 1 Story..."	G W Bromley & Co, 1916 Atlas of the Borough of Manhattan , p. 54 [page scan]

#	Verbatim Quote (abbreviated)	Source (Author, Title, Year, Page)
59	"In the 1930 Land Book of the Borough of Manhattan, on 881-887 Broadway, there is reference to 1 Structure; 7 Story Brick building with Store"	 Bromley, 1930 Land Book of the Borough of Manhattan , p. 53 [page scan]
60	"In the 1930 Land Book of the Borough of Manhattan, on 9-13 East 18th Street, there is reference to 3 structures; 5 Story Brick building with Store and Elevator and 1..."	 Bromley, 1930 Land Book of the Borough of Manhattan , p. 53 [page scan]
61	"In the 1955 Manhattan Land Book, on 881-887 Broadway, there is reference to 1 Structure; 7 Story Brick or Stone or Concrete building with Store and Elevators and Fire..."	 Bromley, 1955 Manhattan Land Book , p. 43 [page scan]
62	"In the 1955 Manhattan Land Book, on 9-13 East 18th Street, there is reference to 1 Structure; 5 Story Brick or Stone or Concrete building with Store and Elevators and 1..."	 Bromley, 1955 Manhattan Land Book , p. 43 [page scan]

XIV. THE INEXORABLE MARCH TO MIDTOWN

#	Verbatim Quote (abbreviated)	Source (Author, Title, Year, Page)
63	"By the second half of the nineteenth century Broadway from Fourteenth to Twenty-third Street was the heart of Ladies Mile."	 Gerdts, Impressionist New York , 1994, p. 60 [page scan]
64	"was the center for hotels, theaters, galleries, and clubs, and for the major retail outlets—Brooks Brothers, Lord and Taylor Dry goods, W. J. Sloane Carpets, Arnold..."	 Gerdts, Impressionist New York , 1994, p. 60 [page scan]
65	"in 1914 Arnold Constable, built in 1868-69 at 881 Broadway at East Nineteenth Street, moved to Fifth Avenue near Fortieth Street"	 Gerdts, Impressionist New York , 1994, p. 60 [page scan]
66	"Lord and Taylor, completed in 1872 at 901 Broadway at Twentieth Street, moved to Thirty-eighth Street."	 Gerdts, Impressionist New York , 1994, p. 60 [page scan]
67	"In 1914. Arnold Constable continued its northward trek, joining the march to midtown and leaving behind this monumental pile. After 150 years in business. Arnold..."	 Tauranac, Essential New York , 1979, p. 42 [page scan]

XV. THE PALIMPSEST RESURRECTED

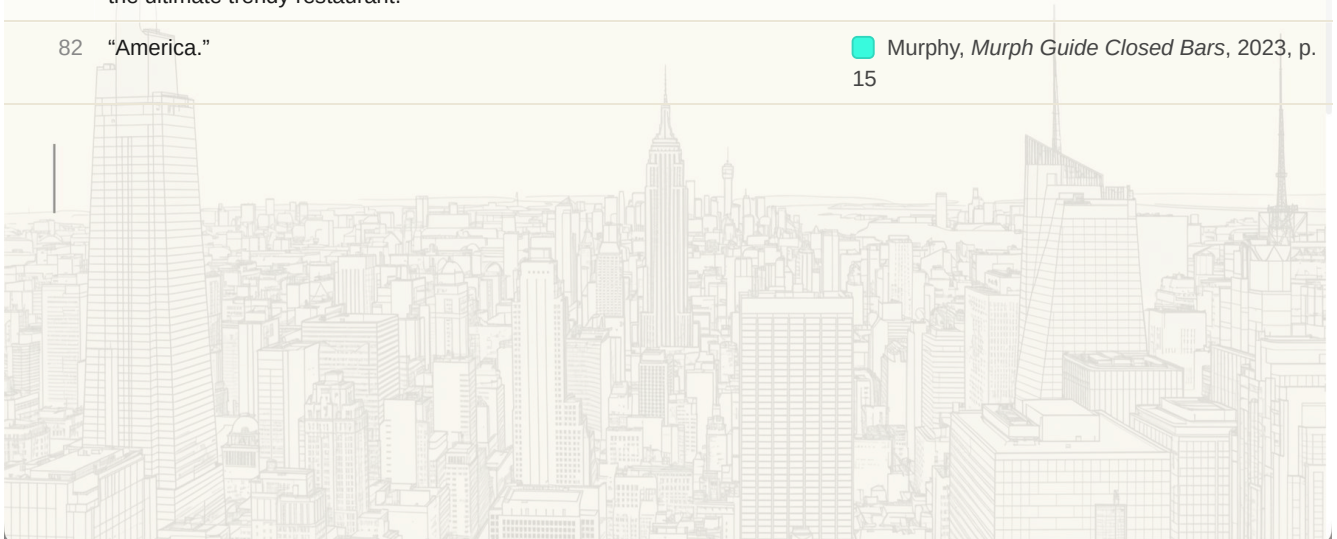

#	Verbatim Quote (abbreviated)	Source (Author, Title, Year, Page)
68	"As the gaslit era waned, Sloane's moved in 1912 to Fifth Avenue and 47th Street, where they remained until 1962. In a subsequent move down the avenue to 38th Street,..."	 Wolfe, New York 15 Walking Tours , 2003, p. 248 [page scan]
69	"the present owner of the 881 Broadway store is also a rug and carpet retailer, and has restored the exterior and interior to re-create the aura of elegance of the 1880s...."	 Wolfe, New York 15 Walking Tours , 2003, p. 248 [page scan]
70	"Some of the buildings are gone, but many remain, and if you peel back the years of neglect, the magic of palimpsest will reveal their glories. Of them all. the building..."	 Tauranac, Essential New York , 1979, p. 42 [page scan]
71	"given a corner tower and mansard roof that still stands today, although passersby are more likely to think it looks like a haunted Gothic mansion than a palace of..."	 Young & Meyers, Adventures in Old New York , 2016, p. 259 [page scan]

XVI. ENGRAVERS, ARCHITECTS, AND SUNDRY TENANTS OF THE RECORD

#	Verbatim Quote (abbreviated)	Source (Author, Title, Year, Page)
72	"W. G. Jackman, Portbait, Historical and Landscape Engraver, In Line Stipple and Mezzotinio, 885 Broadway, Room 92, New York. Refers to D. Appleton & Co., Harper &..."	 Trow, Trows New York City Directory , 1865, p. 1025 [page scan]
73	"GARDINER, WILLIAM W. 1856-66 8-10 E. 19th 1867 119 Broadway 1868-9 907 Broadway 1875-6 Washington av. n. 170th 1877-9 Washington av. n. 169th 1883-91 1364 Washington av."	 Francis, Architects in Practice New York City , 1979, p. 33 [page scan]
74	"Victoria's Secret (34 E 57th St, 1240 Third Ave, 115 Fifth Ave, 565 Broadway, and other locations)"	 Frank, Where to Find It Buy It Eat It In New York , 1980, p. 359 [page scan]
75	"HLW, 115 Fifth Ave. Founded ... 1885 No. New York Architects 2008/2007 ... 65/65 Total Construction Volume (in millions) ... $700.0 No. New York Area Projects ... 135..."	 Jackson, The Encyclopedia of New York , 2010, p. 55 [page scan]

XVII. A FIRMAMENT OF NEON: THE RESTAURANT CALLED AMERICA

#	Verbatim Quote (abbreviated)	Source (Author, Title, Year, Page)
76	"[W 10.] America (restaurant), 9 E. 18th St., bet. Broadway and Fifth Ave. 1985. MGS Architects. A grand space with a raised and skylit bar that is a stage for the..."	 AIA, AIA Edition 3 , 1988, p. 187 [page scan]
77	"A big restaurant (9 E 18th St, 212/505-2110) with large portions and heaps of French fries."	 Frank, Where to Find It Buy It Eat It In New York , 1980, p. 522 [page scan]
78	"FLATIRON DISTRICT/GRAMERCY PARK/LOWER BROADWAY/UNION SQUARE"	 Frank, Where to Find It Buy It Eat It In New York , 1980, p. 25 [page scan]
79	"America (9 E 18th St): American, Sunday ...87"	 Frank, Where to Find It Buy It Eat It In New York , 1980, p. 25 [page scan]
80	"AM-America 9 East 18th St. ☎: 505-2110 $."	 Persky & Campbell, Big Apple Street Smart , 1992, p. 83 [page scan]
81	"The Dizzy Club is the 350-seat America Restaurant 9 East 18th Street between Broadway and Fifth Avenue, northwest of Union Square once the ultimate trendy restaurant."	 Reeves, The Worldwide Guide to Movie Locations , 2001, p. 242 [page scan]
82	"America."	 Murphy, Murph Guide Closed Bars , 2023, p. 15

SOURCE PAGES

33 scanned pages, one per cited source page. Each lists the highlighted quotes drawn from it.

Haswell, Reminiscences of New York by an Octogenarian, 1923, p. 110

Quotes drawn from this page: 1 2

more, 62,627; New York, 123,706, and Philadelphia, 133,273—being nearly 10,000 in excess of New York.

In illustration of the value of improved real estate at this time, a house and lot No. 20 Wall Street, between William and Broad streets, was taxed $60.20, one at No. 9 New Street, $7.36, and one at 8 Park Place, $31.50. Ex-Mayor Daniel F. Tiemann's father and uncle leased twenty-one lots on Twenty-third Street near Broadway at $3.00 per annum. They had previously leased on Fifth Avenue, Nineteenth and Twentieth streets, sixty lots at $50.00 per year. In 1840 a portion of the lots leased by them, 1820, on Fifth Avenue between Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets, was sold for $27,000, and Arnold & Constable in 1868 paid $375,000 for them. 820 847.1

March 8 the New York American, published and edited by Charles King, was established at 10 Broad Street. The New York Lead Works began operations in Broadway near Art Street (Astor Place); Broadway at this point was unpaved.

Robert Swartwout, Alderman, proposed to enlarge the Park by extending it to Ann, Beekman, and Nassau streets, so as to make it as nearly square as practicable.

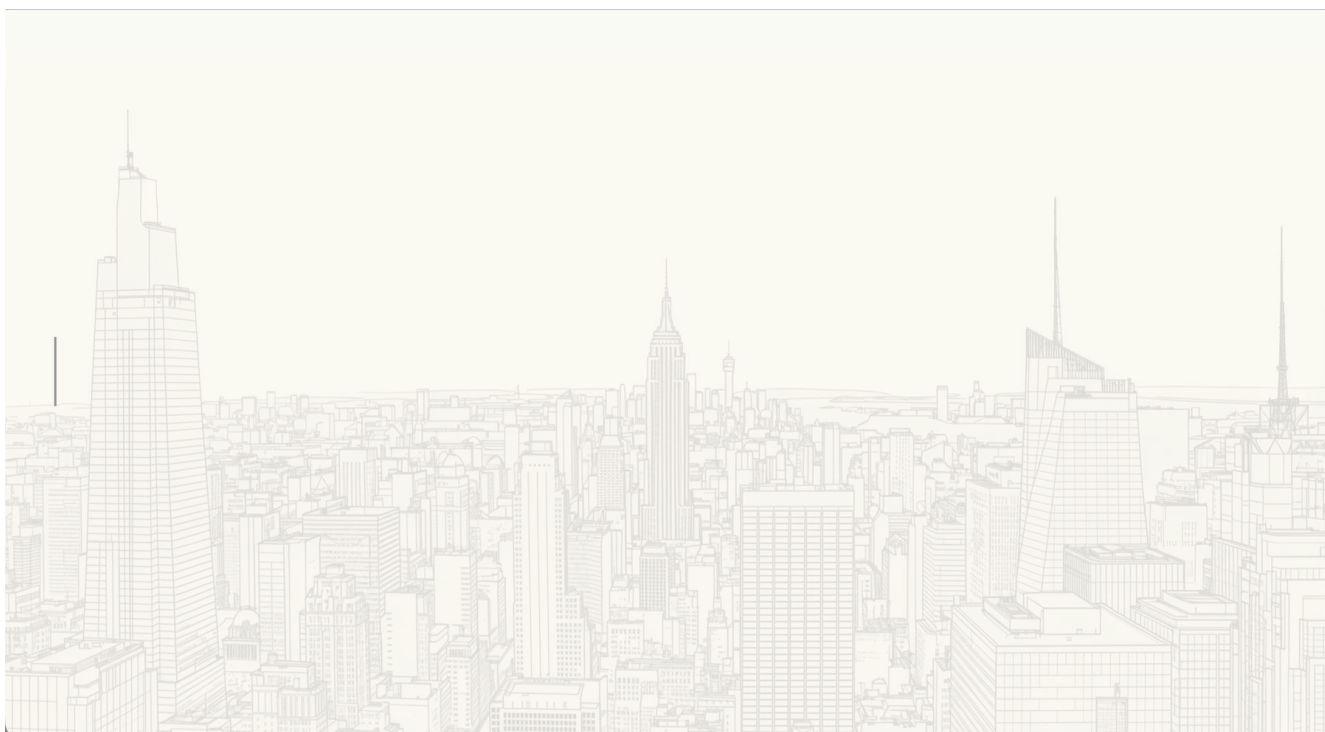

State and Charter offices, and the incumbents thereof, were held in much higher esteem than they are at the present time. This cannot be better shown than by the circumstance that for the election of the year in the First Ward of the city, such men as Isaac Pearson, Peter H. Schenck, and Augustus Wynkoop, were appointed inspectors, and Gulian C. Verplanck, Samuel B. Romaine, Reuben Munson, Robert R. Hunter and others of like stamp were elected to the Assembly.

In this year Henry Eckford built at his yard in Brooklyn, near the Navy Yard, the first veritable steamer, the Robert Fulton, as in contra-distinction to a steamboat, that is, she was a full- or square-rigged ship.

May 25. The Park Theatre was destroyed by fire; the

Stokes, The Iconography of Manhattan Island Volume Three, 1918, p. 930

Quotes drawn from this page: 3

- Churches, 284-5. Demolished to make room for Manhattan Bridge approach, c. 1909.
- 1375.2 JOHN STREET MEETING. See Wesley Chapel, infra.
MADISON AVENUE M. E. CHURCH. 1375-2
Site: N. E. cor. Madison Ave. and 60th St. Shown in Architectural Rec. (1896), VI: 187.
- MARINERS' M. E. CHURCH. 112-2
Site: 76 Roosevelt St. Corner-stone 1819; opened 1820 (Greenleaf's Hist. of the Churches, 303); removed to 46 Catharine St. 1854.—Haswell's Reminiscences, 210.
- 276 MARINERS' M. E. CHURCH (second site). 278-1
Site: S. E. cor. Madison and Catharine Sts. Opened 1854.—Haswell's Reminiscences, 210. Shown in Man. Com. Coun., 1868, p. 468.
- MULBERRY STREET M. E. CHURCH. 522-2
Site: W. side Mulberry St., 100 ft. S. of Bleecker St. Erected 1834.—Greenleaf's Hist. of the Churches, 295; N. Y., Past, Pres. and Fut., 101. Shown on Colton's Topog. Map (1836); Drapp's Atlases (1854, 1868). Now San Salvatore's R. C. Church.
- 481.2 RIGGING LOFT, THE, OR FIRST METH. EPIS. PLACE OF WORSHIP. 77-2
Site: 120 William St. Services held in this bldg. 1766-8.—Greenleaf's Hist. of the Churches, 282; see Chronology. Shown, litho. by H. R. Robinson, in possession of N. Y. Hist. Soc.; Man. Com. Coun., 1850, p. 422. Bldg. demolished 1900.—Records of the Title Guar. and Trust Co. Bldg. of Lehn & Fink now covers site.
- WESLEY'S CHAPEL. "JOHN STREET MEETING." 67-2
Site: 44 John St. Erected 1768.—A Short Hist. Account of the Early Soc. of Meth., 6-7. Demolished and rebuilt 1817; demolished 1840 and rebuilt 1841.—Greenleaf's Hist. of the Churches, 284. Shown on Pl. 43, Vol. I; see Chronology 1767; also Vol. I, pp. 344-6. Shown on Bancker survey (1785), in box J-Q, folder J, MSS. Division, N. Y. Pub. Library. Three successive bldgs. shown on wash drawing by Jos. B. Smith in possession of the N. Y. Hist. Soc.; same, litho. by Endicott & Co., in possession of I.N.P.S.
- 176 WILLET STREET M. E. CHURCH. 336-1
Site: 5 Willett St. Corner-stone 1825; opened 1826.—Greenleaf's Hist. of the Churches, 288-9. Synagogue now occupies edifice.
- ZION AFRICAN M. E. CHURCH. 176-1
Site: S. W. cor. Church and Leonard Sts. Erected 1800; demolished and rebuilt 1820; destroyed by fire and rebuilt 1839.—Greenleaf's Hist. of the Churches, 322. Congr. now at 127 W. 89th St.
- MORAVIAN 847.1
- FIRST MORAVIAN CHURCH (first site). 78-1
Site: 106-108 Fulton St. Corner-stone 1751 (Doc. Hist. N. Y., 8vo ed., III: 1027); dedicated 1752 (Greenleaf's Hist. of the Churches, 277); demolished and rebuilt 1829 (ibid., 278); demolished and ground sold 1843 (ibid.); congr. removed to cor. Houston and Mott Sts. 1845.—Ibid. Shown on Pls. 34, 40, 41, 42, 64 and 70, Vol. I. Downing Bldg. now on site.
- 509 FIRST MORAVIAN CHURCH (second site). 509-2
Site: S. W. cor. Houston and Mott Sts. Opened 1845 (Greenleaf's Hist. of the Churches, 278); congr. removed 1867. Now cor. Lexington Ave. and 30th St.—Smith's N. Y. City in 1789, 158.
- FIRST MORAVIAN CHURCH (present site). 885-1
Site: S. W. cor. Lexington Ave. and 30th St. Erected as Rose Hill Bapt. Ch. c. 1849. Later P. E. Church of the Mediator, shown as such in Fersenheim & Witschies's Litho. Views of Some of the P. E. Churches in N. Y. City, 1867. Occupied by Moravians c. 1869.—Haswell's Reminiscences, 211; Smith's N. Y. in 1789, 158.
- PRESBYTERIAN
- ASSOCIATE (SECEDERS') PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH. 78-1
Site: E. side Nassau, bet. John and Fulton Sts. Erected 1787 (Greenleaf's Hist. of the Churches, 212); rebuilt 1803 (Haswell's Reminiscences, 204); sold to South Bapt. Ch., and congr. removed to cor. Grand and Mercer Sts. 1824.—Greenleaf, 212, 213. Shown on A. Pl. 17, Vol. III.
- BLEECKER STREET PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH. 529-1
Site: 65-67 Bleecker St. Corner-stone 1825; opened 1826 (Greenleaf's Hist. of the Churches, 157); congr. removed to Fourth Ave., cor. 22d St.
- "BRICK CHURCH" (first site). 101 101-1
Site: Block bounded by Nassau and Beekman Sts. and Park Row. Architect, probably John McComb. Begun 1766 (Liber Grants, D: 600, Compt. Office); opened 1768; prison and hosp. for British troops during Revolutionary War (Greenleaf's Hist. of the Churches, 130-1, 135); restored 1783-4; demolished 1858; congr. removed to cor. Fifth Ave. and 37th St. 1858.—Sheppard Knapp's Hist. of the Brick Church. Shown on Pls. 41, 42, 64, 70 and 72-4, Vol. I; and A. Pl. 27A, Vol. III; water-colour drawing by Robertson in possession of N. Y. Hist. Soc.; Plate in N. Y. Mirror (1829), VII: 89.—Times and Potter Bldgs. now on site.
- 839 "BRICK CHURCH" (present site). 839-1
Site: N. W. cor. Fifth Ave. and 37th St. Erected 1858 on site of William Coventry H. Waddell's house (q. v.). Congr. came here from Beekman St.—Knapp's Hist. of the Brick Church (1909). Shown, ibid., 278. Architects, Leopold Eidlitz and Griffith Thomas.
- 839 CEDAR STREET PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH. 45-3
Site: N. side Cedar St., bet. William and Nassau Sts. Begun 1807 (Goodrich's Picture of N. Y., 44.2 219); opened 1808 (N.-Y. Gazette and Gen. Advertiser, Nov. 7, 1808); demolished 1834; congr. removed to cor. Duane and Church Sts., 1836.—Greenleaf's Hist. of the Churches, 136-7; see also University Pl. Presby. Ch., infra. Then called "Duane St. Church." Congr. removed to S. E. cor. Fifth Ave. and 19th St. 1852; thenceforward known as Fifth Avenue Presby. Ch. (q. v.)—King's Handbook, 366.
- CENTRAL PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH (first site). 482-1
Site: 408 Broome St. Corner-stone 1821; opened 1822.—Greenleaf's Hist. of the Churches, 165; Goodrich's Picture of N. Y., 220.
- CENTRAL PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH (second site). 1028-1
Site: 212-220 W. 57th St. Erected 1878, having previously stood at S. E. cor. of Fifth Ave. and 19th St. as Fifth Ave. Presby. Ch. (q. v.), and presented by that cong. to the Cent. Presby. Ch. when the ground on which it stood was sold at auction 1875.—Information by courtesy of Rev.

Culyer, A Brief History of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, 1877, p. 8

Quotes drawn from this page: 4 5 6 7 9

Government in the Seminary at Princeton. This appointment was accepted by him, and Presbytery, after hearing the parties, decided to dissolve the pastoral connection on the 25th of June, 1849.

The same reasons that made it necessary to remove from Cedar street, operated with greater urgency to demand another change of locality. A number of unsuccessful efforts had been made to obtain a pastor. Some of the members of the church, who had removed to the upper part of the city, had commenced efforts to build a church for their accommodation and for others who were disposed to join them. In the fall of 1850 a proposition was made to the Duane street church to sell their edifice, and to unite in the enterprise, and give a call to their late pastor. This plan was adopted with great unanimity, the call was made and accepted, and measures were immediately taken to procure a site and erect a church. On the 12th of November, 1851, Rev. James W. Alexander, D.D., was installed pastor of the Duane street church by the Presbytery of New York. The congregation met for public worship in the chapel of the University until the dedication of the new edifice on the corner of Fifth Avenue and Nineteenth street, which took place December 19, 1852, and the corporate name was changed. Rev. Dr. Alexander was removed by death on the 31st of July, 1859, in the State of Virginia, whither he had gone for the benefit of his health.

At a meeting of the congregation, held on the

Culyer, A Brief History of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, 1877, p. 14

Quotes drawn from this page: 8

to be located not above Twenty-third Street. After a considerable sum was subscribed, a suggestion was made to the Duane Street church to sell their building and unite with the movers of the plan for a new church and call the Rev. Dr. Alexander to the pastorate. This suggestion meeting with the approval of the congregation, the call was given to Dr. Alexander, and accepted by him, and arrangements were made at once to purchase the lots at the corner of Fifth Avenue and Nineteenth Street, and the building was erected and occupied for the first time in December, 1852, and the pews were sold, realizing a sum sufficient to pay all the cost. While the church was being built, Dr. Alexander visited Europe, at the request of the congregation. The history of the church from the commencement of the second pastorate of Dr. Alexander to the present time is so well known, that it seems to be unnecessary to do anything more than to present some statistics of interest to the congregation.

By the rules of the Presbyterian Church, the Session of every church is required to report annually to the Presbytery the amounts collected for the various Boards of the church for the expenses of the congregation, and for such societies and institutions outside of the church as the Session may direct. From the opening of the Nineteenth Street church to the spring of 1877 (twenty-five years) the aggregate amount reported to Presbytery was $1,814,500, showing an annual average of $72,500. For the ten years of the pastorate of Dr. Hall the amount was $974,800, an annual average of $97,480. The first report, 1853, was 425 members and $24,200 collections; the last report, 1877, was 1,472 members and $146,600 collections.

Patterson, Fifth Avenue The Best Address, 1998, p. 49

Quotes drawn from this page: 10

The shipowner Marshall O. Roberts was one of the first to build a grand house on Fifth Avenue above Fourteenth and the American Jockey Club promoted a racetrack in the Bronx named in his honor, Jerome Park, where the Belmont Stakes were run until the track closed in 1889.

- 846.1 Street. The double residence on the southeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Eighteenth Street boasted an extensive art gallery, Roberts being a major collector and patron of living artists. The house was demolished around 1895 to make room for a commercial building.

The poet laureate of Madison Square was a New York lawyer named William Allen Butler, living on West Twelfth Street, who amused himself by writing light verse for magazines. In 1857 he published in Harper's Weekly a poem satirizing the social ambitions of the local swells entitled "Miss Flora M'Flimsey of Madison Square." This long piece of doggerel was the lament of a fashionable young lady who tirelessly bought new clothes in New York and Paris yet had "nothing to wear."

At the end of the poem Flora is exhausted by shopping but still dissatisfied with her wardrobe:

And yet, though scarce three months have passed since the day
This merchandise went, on twelve carts, up Broadway,
The same Miss M'Flimsey, of Madison Square,
The last time we met was in utter despair,
Because she had nothing whatever to wear!

To the surprise of its author, the poem was an immediate success: Harper's sold eighty thousand copies of the issue containing it, an extraordinary number for the time; newspapers everywhere picked the poem up and reprinted it—without paying royalties, so the dismayed author received only his original fifty-dollar fee from the magazine. "Miss Flora M'Flimsey" was published as a book in both New York and London and regarded everywhere as a biting satire on the idle and spendthrift New Yorkers; for years the poem was a byword for social pretension and excess. William Dean Howells, the most prominent American literary critic of the day, surprisingly declared that the poem "deserved a permanent place in literature."

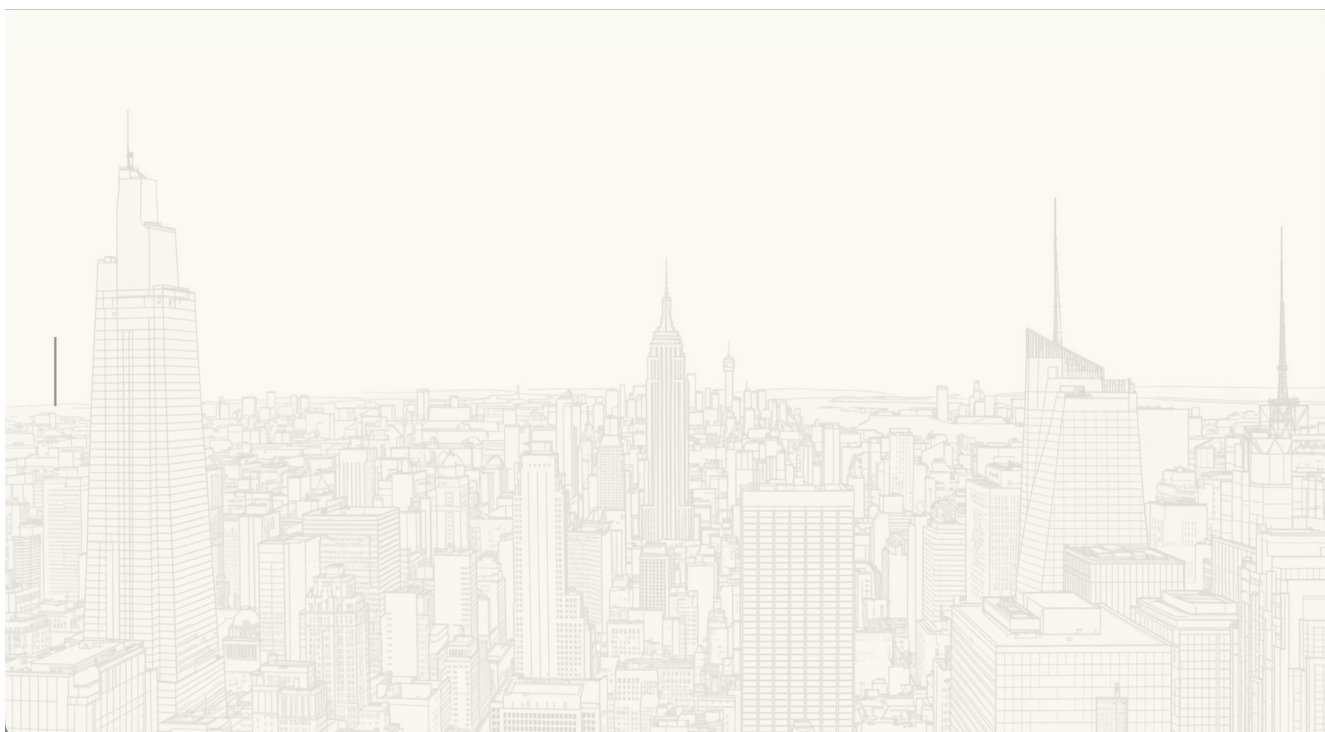

847.1

The Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, which counted many Madison Square residents among its congregation, was built on the southeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Nineteenth Street in 1852–53; the architect was Leopold Eidlitz, who designed other religious structures in the city. The subsequent history of the church was unusual: in 1875 it was sold on, his homes were nothing extraordinary for such an exalted avenue. But Stewart broke with his lifelong prudence when he began his white marble, mansard-roofed mansion, which took $3 million and nearly ten years to build and furnish.

Lockwood, Manhattan Moves Uptown, 1976, p. 301

Quotes drawn from this page: 11

Stewart's house, with its broad halls lined with sculpture, its gold dinner service, the ballroom, the sweeping stairway, set a new standard of extravagance. The art gallery "far surpassed in importance and value any other in this country," in the opinion of the Times. Although some newspapers predictably praised the house as "chaste," "elegant," and "a temple rather than a mansion," others pronounced it "hideous," "over-loaded with ornament," and "a vast tomb." Stewart enjoyed living in the house only a few years; he died in 1876, and by then shops and clubhouses had reached Thirty-fourth Street.

By the 1880s the only truly residential stretch of Fifth Avenue below Central Park began around Fiftieth Street. Rows of $100,000 to $150,000 brownstones had risen here after the Civil War, and the city laid out Grand Army Plaza in 1870 after acquiring the land by condemnation. St. Thomas' Church moved to the northwest corner of Fifth Avenue and Fifty-third Street in 1870, after occupying a site at Broadway and Houston Street since 1826. Fifth Avenue Presbyterian, which had been located at the southeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Nineteenth Street since 1852, moved to the building it still occupies, at the northwest corner of Fifth Avenue and Fifty-fifth Street, in 1875. The most impressive-looking church on all of Fifth Avenue was St. Patrick's Cathedral, on the blockfront between East Fiftieth and East Fifty-first streets, which opened in 1879, twenty-one years after the laying of its cornerstone.

In the 1880s the Vanderbilt family built four mansions on this stretch of Fifth Avenue, each one of them grander than the Stewart residence a mile downtown. William Henry Vanderbilt, son of the commodore, built a pair of Renaissance-style houses on the west blockfront of Fifth Avenue between Fifty-first and Fifty-second streets in 1880-1884. He lived in one, and his daughters and their families occupied the other. His son William Kissam Vanderbilt built a lovely Gothic Revi-

Culyer, A Brief History of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, 1877, p. 1

Quotes drawn from this page: 12

“Image Caption: FIFTH AVENUE CHURCH erected 1875”

CULYER

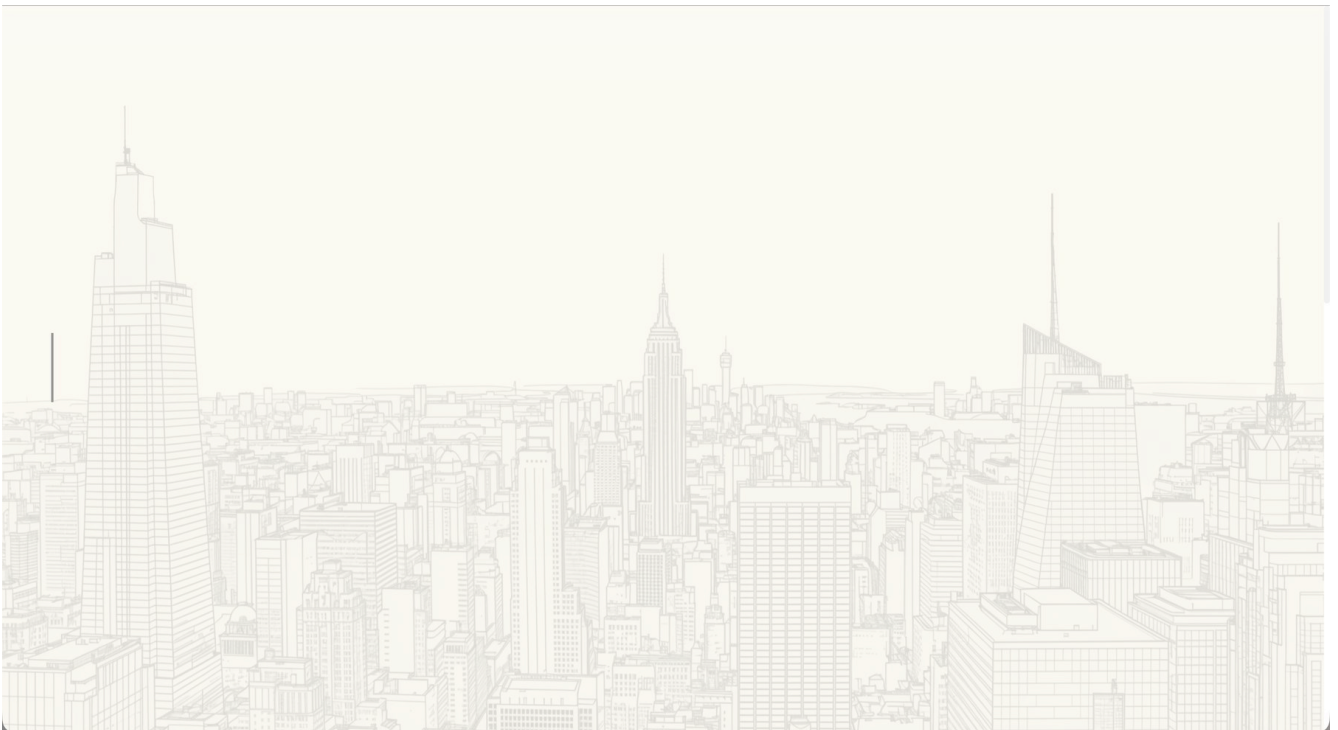

- (1877) A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE FIFTH AVENUE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH
- 1875 · P. 1

Mentioned as: “Fifth Avenue Church”

Brown, Fifth Avenue Old and New, 1924, p. 36

Quotes drawn from this page: 13 14

Fifth Avenue — Old and New married while holding office. Both churches occupy block fronts, and are richly endowed.

For more than a century, Grace Church has been interwoven with the life of New York; its history and ideals are part of the historic fabric of Fifth Avenue.

Some of the families who lived on Fifth Avenue in the '70s were:

1—Miss Frances A. Graham's school for girls (she succeeded Miss Lucy M. Green); 37—Grosvenor House, northeast corner of 10th Street; 39—George N. Miller; 41—Mrs. David S. Kennedy; 47—Mrs. Lead Hawley; 49—William W. Parkin; 51—Eli White; 53—James Lenox; 55—John Fishbee Sheafe; 57—Dr. James Lenox Banks; 81—John Brooks; Daniel Parish, southeast corner of 16th Street; 87—Dr. Robert G. Remsen; 99—Robert Lenox Kennedy; Fifth Avenue Church (Dr. John Hall), southeast corner of 19th Street, afterwards moved to 55th Street and Fifth Avenue.

6—Lispensard Stewart; 8—John Taylor Johnston; The Berkeley, southwest corner of 9th Street; 24—Henry C. de Rham, northwest corner of 9th Street; 32—J. H. Gautier, southwest corner of 10th Street; 44—Henry R. Remsen; 46—Aaron B. Belknap; 60—Robert M. Minturn, northwest corner of 12th Street; 62—Charles M. Talbot; 66—Dr. Gunning S. Bedford; 90—Arthur Leary; 100—William H. Gebhard; 102—Mrs. John Q. Aymar; 104—Israel Corse; 106—Peter Hayden; 118—Robert Winthrop; 128—Gordon W. Burnham.

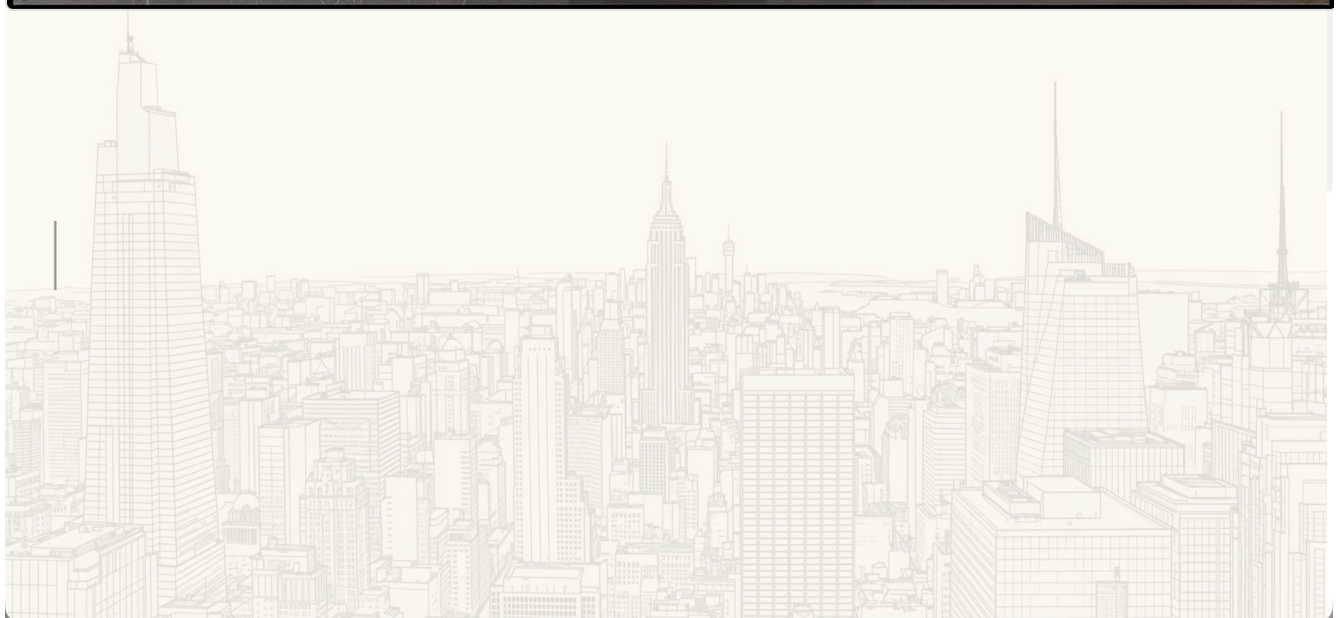

When the First Presbyterian Church moved from Wall Street to Fifth Avenue and 12th Street, James Lenox moved, in 1846, from his residence (formerly his father's, Robert Lenox), 59 Broadway, to his new residence on the N. E. corner of 12th Street (No. 53).

In the same year his brothers-in-law moved to their new residences on the Avenue—William Banks from 16 State Street to the N. W. corner of 13th Street (No. 72); James Donaldson to the N. E. corner of 11th Street; David S. Kennedy to the S. E. corner of 11th Street. Later another brother-in-law, John Fisher Sheafe, moved to 55 Fifth Avenue, next to Mr. Lenox. In the early '60s Dr. James Lenox Banks moved to 57 Fifth Avenue.

Until about a year or so ago, property on the Avenue below 12th Street remained in the hands of old families who refused to part with their early homes. A few deaths, however, have served to start the inevitable change, and already half a dozen homesteads have disappeared and luxurious apartment houses have been constructed on these sites. Contrary to the general expectation, this new development has not altered fundamentally the residential character of this section. For once business has been diverted and has skipped all the territory from the Square to beyond 12th Street, due to the fact that Sailors' Snug Harbor property cannot be sold; yet in this neighborhood the blocks that house the older publishing firms have undergone commercial development. As we approach 13th Street we come to the Spingler farm, pictured on page 33.

Quotes drawn from this page: 15 16

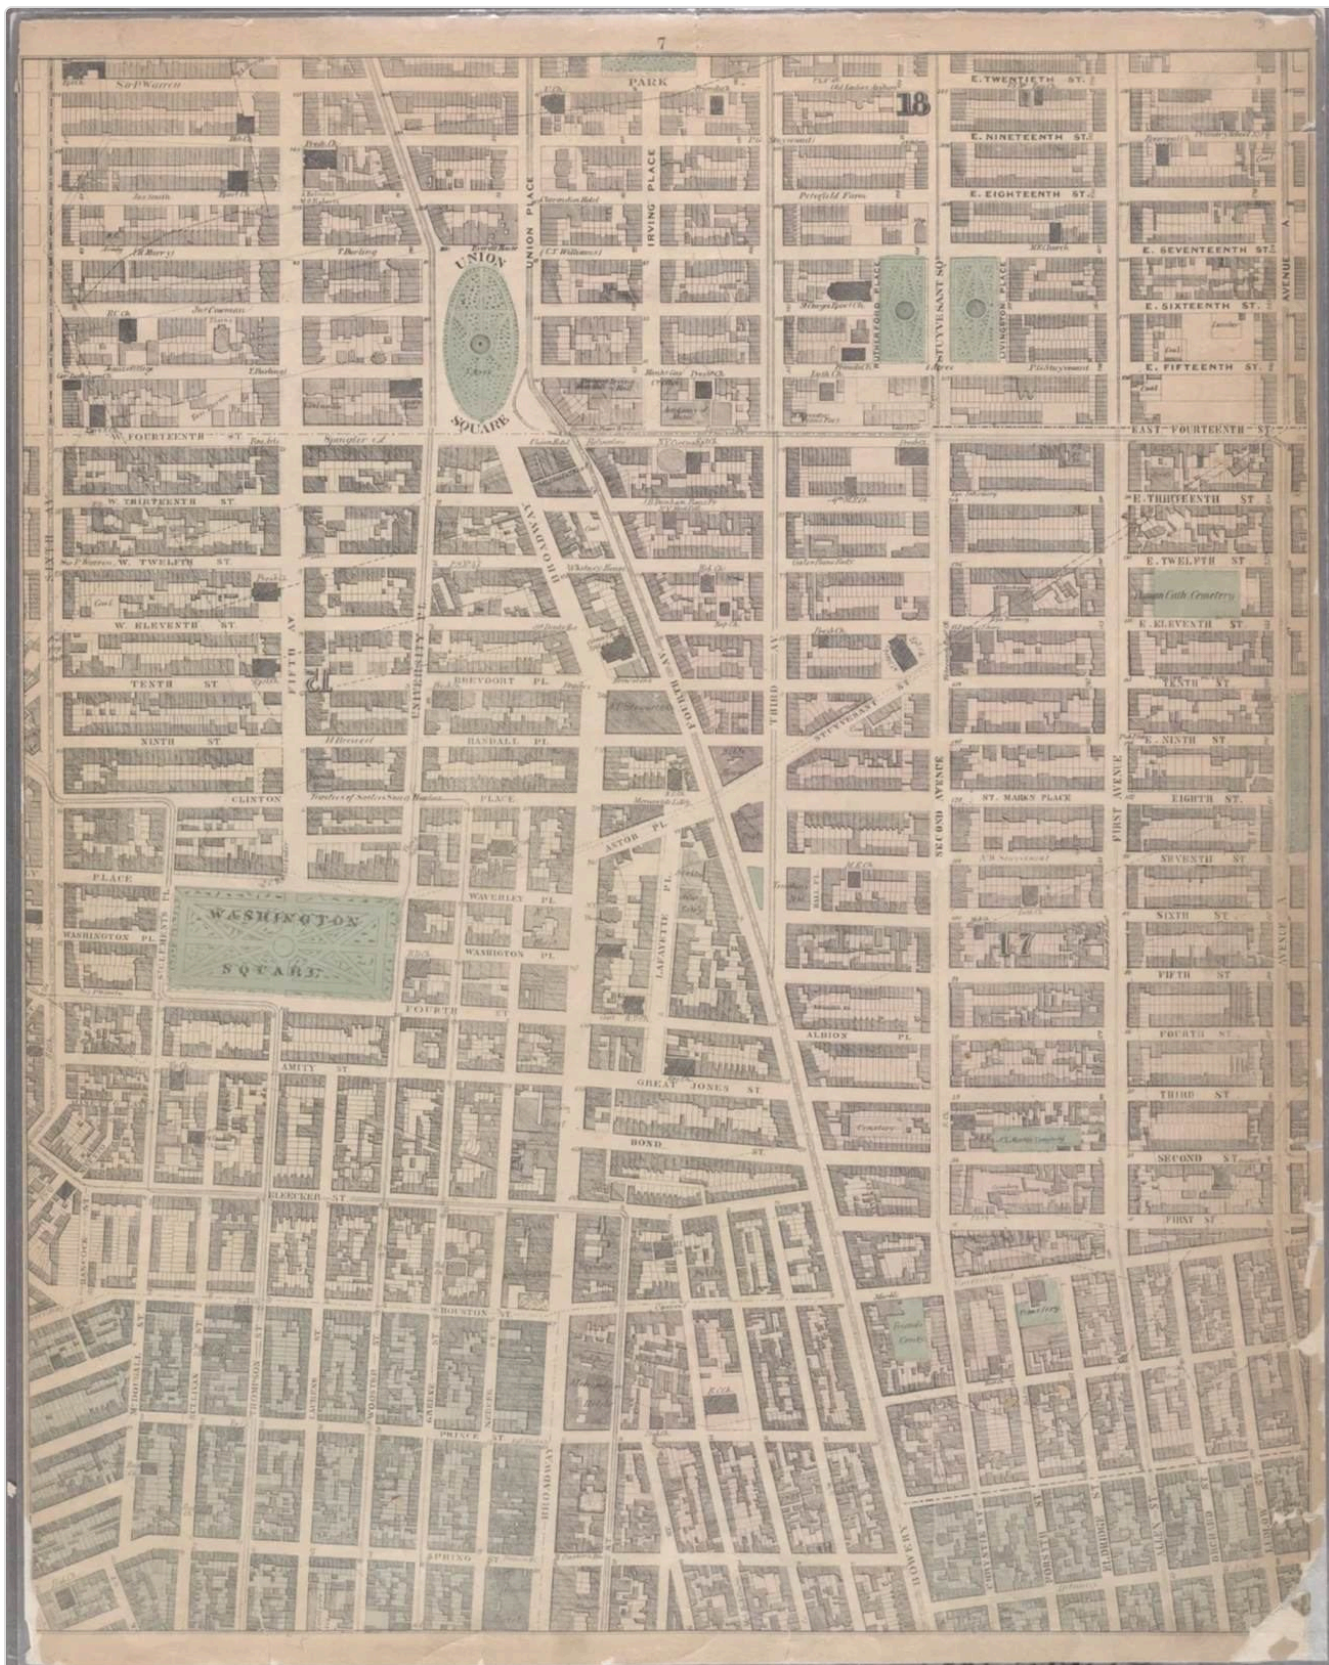

Quotes drawn from this page: 15 16

Dripps, 1867 Dripps Plan, p. 7

Quotes drawn from this page: 17 18

Tauranac, Essential New York, 1979, p. 42

Quotes drawn from this page: 19 20 30 32 33 34 67 70

881 Broadway

1869

(Originally Arnold Constable & Co.)

Southwest corner of Nineteenth Street, extending to Fifth Avenue

Extension, 1877

Griffith Thomas, Architect

With its elaborate mansard roof, Arnold Constable was one of the grandest stores on Ladies' Mile.

Neighborhoods change. What was originally a residential area becomes yesterday's first-class shopping center, today's commercial district, and maybe the site of tomorrow's renaissance. By the 1870s this area was entering the second stage of that urban progression. Moving into it were New York's largest stores, stores that had started as small shops in lower Manhattan. By 1900 this uptown migration would be complete, with New York's finest stores lining Broadway solidly from Eighth to Twenty-third streets, and Sixth Avenue from Fourteenth to Twenty-third streets. Since this was the cream fourteenth to twenty-third streets. Since this was the cream of New York's shopping, and since women were reputedly the principal patrons, the stretches became known as Ladies' Mile. Some of the buildings are gone, but many remain, and if you peel back the years of neglect, the magic of palimpsest will reveal their glories. Of them all, the building erected by Arnold Constable & Co. is one of the best preserved and certainly one of the grandest.

The business started in 1825, and by 1857 Arnold Constable was ensconced on Canal Street in a five-story building with a marble front, designed by Griffith Thomas. By the end of the Civil War enough profits had been made to move into an even grander building in the vanguard of the uptown migration. Built in 1869, Thomas's second Arnold Constable commission was a five-story building with a marble facade on the corner of Nineteenth Street and Broadway. In 1873 its two-story mansard roof was added, a roof that surely could have been the inspiration for the best of cartoonist Charles

Young & Meyers, Adventures in Old New York, 2016, p. 259

Quotes drawn from this page: 21 22 23 39 71

Competing retailers, however, chose to leapfrog the “Iron Palace” at its 9th Street location and follow the growth of the city north, clustering themselves farther up Broadway. Elegant and powerful Fifth Avenue set the rules for the neighborhood’s retail establishments. Lined with the townhouses of the rich and famous, its wealthy residents demanded shopping options close by. Soon Broadway between Union and Madison Squares offered a fine variety of dry goods stores, and developed into a prim and proper “carriage trade,” whose customers always (at least in theory) rolled up in style.⁴ Arnold Constable & Co.*

Dressed to shop: Lovely ladies shop along Sixth Avenue.

(881–887 Broadway, at 19th Street) opened its “palace of trade” in 1869, and was known for the high-end fabrics and exotic carpets that would entrance the Vanderbilts and Rockefellers. Tiffany & Co. moved its fine emporium, called the “palace of jewels” — you get the point — to its new headquarters at Union Square West and 15th Street in 1870. They even put the French crown jewels on display here in 1887. The Lord & Taylor* store (901 Broadway, at 20th Street), built in 1870, was given a corner tower and mansard roof that still stands today, although passersby are more likely to think it looks like a haunted Gothic mansion than a palace of anything.

Retail establishments targeting less moneyed customers wanted in on the action and chose Sixth Avenue as their main drag, served, as it was, by an elevated train line that opened in 1876. It was specifically called “Fashion Row.” Rowland Macy, who had opened a relatively modest store at Sixth Avenue and 14th Street in 1858, expanded by the early 1880s to command much of that block.* Elevated riders marveled at Macy’s flamboyant sign, hoisted high above the train line.

The store owned by a Jewish entrepreneur named Benjamin Altman, B. Altman & Co.,* flourished in the Lower East Side before it moved to Sixth Avenue and 19th Street in 1877. It took on competitors in equally formidable cast-iron structures, such as that of Irish mogul Hugh O’Neill* at Sixth Avenue and 20th Street, topped with its golden domes. There were so many stores, in ⁴ * indicates the building is still standing and in fine shape today with different occupants.

Boyer, Manhattan Manners, 1985, p. 96

Quotes drawn from this page: 24 25 26 27

Fig. 113. Major stores along Ladies Mile: 1860s–1890s.

they have only to insist upon having strictly observed the two prime factors of successful store architecture, to wit, strength and simplicity of design, in order to secure the desired economic effect in the working of brick and stone.¹²²

Along Ladies Mile, however, cast iron would prevail.

The Boundaries of Commerce

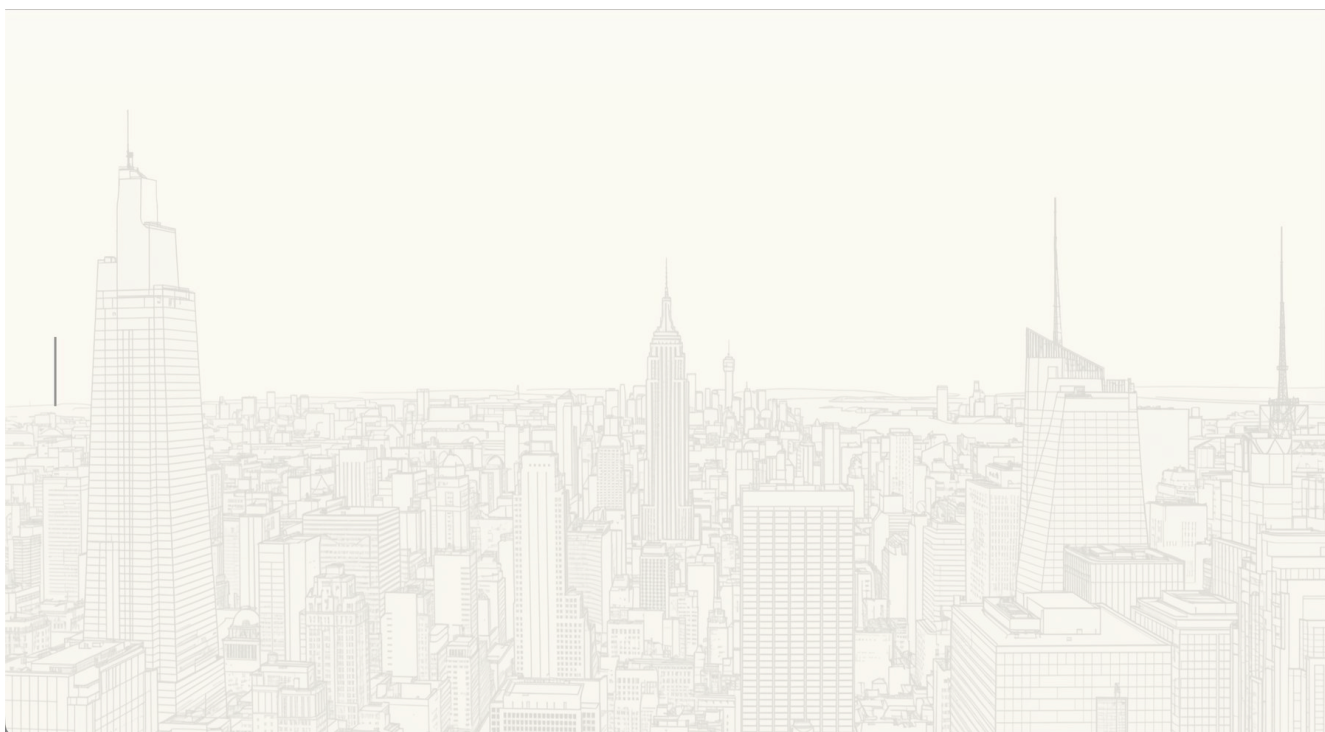

American commercial architecture adopted a functional form: beauty was found in perfect mechanical efficiency. Ladies Mile of the late 1860s through the 1880s abounded in Renaissance boxlike buildings and flat cast-iron facades (figs. 113, 114). Diagonally opposite the Stewart Store, John Kellum designed another cast-iron structure, the James McCreery store in 1868¹²³ (fig. 115). The real inroads of commercialization above Fourteenth Street were felt, however, when Renwick's Church of the Puritans was torn down in 1869 and replaced by yet another Kellum-designed cast-iron building, the five-story Tiffany Building, at the southwest corner of Fifteenth Street and Union Square (fig. 116). It was not long before the older downtown dry goods stores joined this march northward. Arnold Constable and Company opened a new store in 1869 in a marble-fronted five-story building (881–883 Broadway) on the west side of Broadway between Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets, designed by Griffith Thomas (fig. 117). In 1873 Thomas added a huge two-story mansard roof for extra floor space and in 1877 a cast-iron replica of the Broadway facade was designed, again by Thomas, for the new Fifth Avenue extension.¹²⁴ In the same year that Arnold Constable and Company began to build, Lord and Taylor moved into a highly ornate five-story cast-iron building, designed by James Giles, on the southwest corner of Broadway and Twentieth Street at 901 Broadway (fig. 118).

Two of the most unusual of all the cast-iron stores in the vicinity of Ladies Mile were for the Domestic Sewing Machine Company, designed by Griffith Thomas, on the southwest corner of Broadway and Fourteenth Street in 1872 (see fig. 107) and Hugh O'Neill's store, designed by Mortimer Merritt in 1875, on the west side of Sixth Avenue between Twentieth and Twenty-first streets. The architectural glory of the Domestic building was carried still further in the O'Neill store with its bulbous Byzantine domes rising above the five-story towers that rounded each corner. A center pavilion higher than its adjacent side bays was crowned by a sculpted pediment supported by a great bracketed cornice.¹²⁵

Because the major property owners along Broadway below Fourteenth Street, A. T. Stewart among them, had opposed any form of rapid transit along this avenue, by the 1870s lower Broadway had been all but deserted by the fashionable retail trade. The sole means of transport was still the lumbering omnibus; awkward to enter and alight from, it was a particularly undesirable vehicle for ladies, exacerbated by the absence of a superintendent who could enforce decorum on the part of the unruly passengers. Although horsecar railroads ran parallel to both sides of Broadway below Fourteenth Street, they did not contribute to the welfare of the avenue, for they either crossed objectionable parts of the city or else diverged at sharp angles from Broadway, making it inaccessible to women shoppers whose patronage alone created the best shopping district.¹²⁶ Sixth Avenue, on the other hand, was the earliest thoroughfare to accept horsecars, and it soon became the favored seat for trade, with new business streets developing by the celebrated brass pole. Le Brun's designs are unabashedly eclectic in style, but all reflect the Department's determination to ensure that its buildings were distinctive civic ornaments.

Hennessey, Fifth Avenue, 2022, p. 43

Quotes drawn from this page: 28 38 50 51 52 53

For Engine Company 14, Le Brun provided a symmetrical, three-story structure in buff brick above a polished granite base. Beautiful terra-cotta ornament, inspired by Italian Renaissance examples, lends the building its flair.

48 Constable Building

109–111 Fifth Avenue

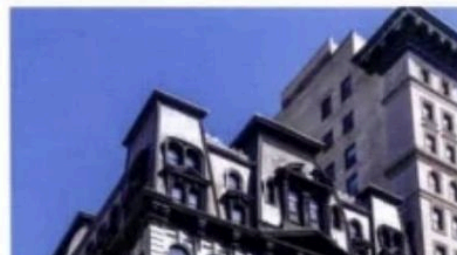

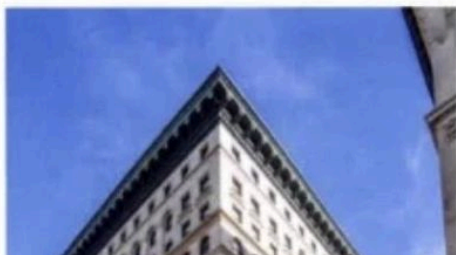

1894–95 · WILLIAM SCHICKEL

49 Arnold Constable Store

113–115 Fifth Avenue

1876 · GRIFFITH THOMAS

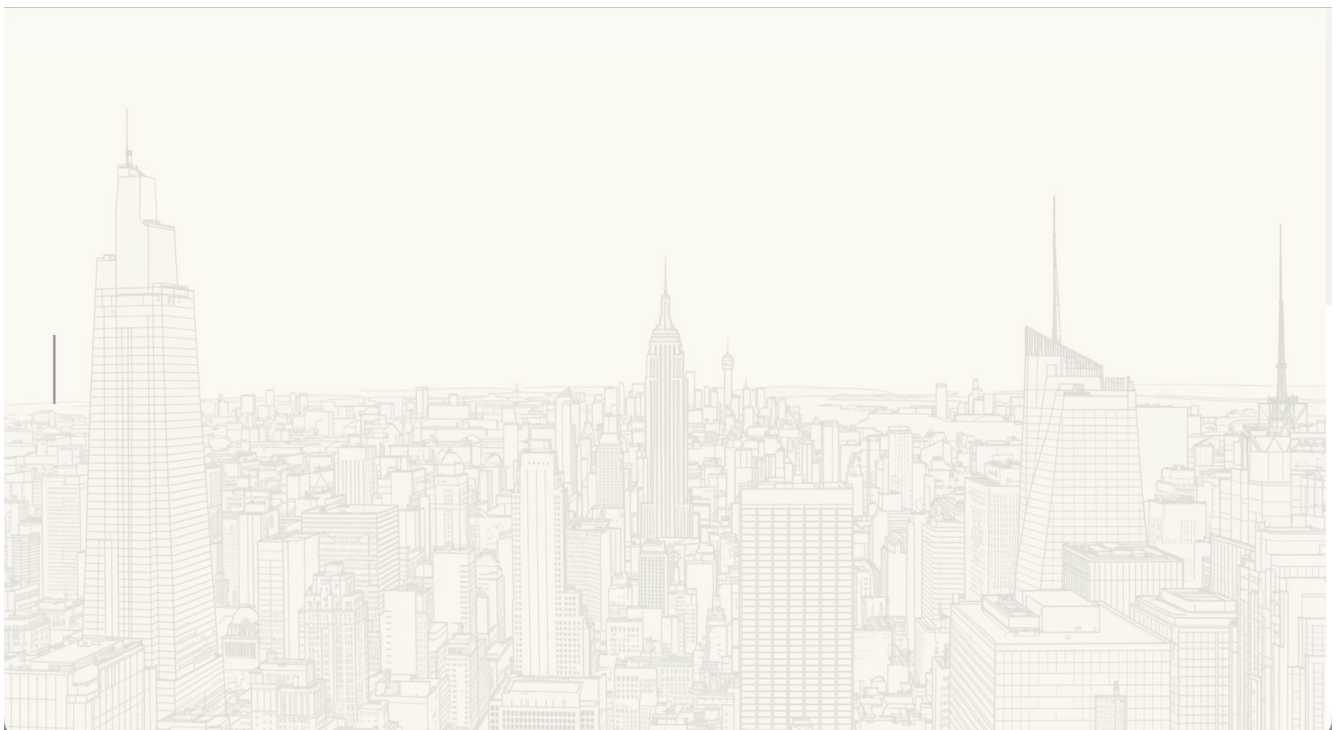

Aaron Arnold opened his first store in Lower Manhattan in 1825; the company name changed to Arnold Constable & Company following the marriage of his daughter to James Mansell Constable, an employee who became a partner in 1842. In 1868 with the emergence of Union Square as retail center, the firm hired Griffith Thomas to build a new store at 881–887 Broadway. Business was brisk, and in 1876 the store was extended west along 19th Street to Fifth Avenue. This facade echoes that of the main front on Broadway except that it is executed in cast iron. With its bold mansard roof and richly sculptural facade, the building is

AIA, AIA Edition 3, 1988, p. 187

Quotes drawn from this page: 29 76

→ Sullivan-esque OK
Rock-face brownstone in Romanesque Revival, with a charming colonnade at the top floor. A benefaction of Mrs. Elliott F. Shepard, Cornelius Vanderbilt's eldest daughter.

[W 9b.] 9 East 16th Street (lofts), bet. Union Sq. W. and Fifth Ave. ca. 1890.

~~Sullivan~~ Sullivan-esque limestone for the first 2 floors and then terra-cotta candy cane above.

[W 9c.] Originally Judge Building, 110 Fifth Ave., NW cor. W. 16th St. 1888. McKim, Mead & White. Altered, 1988, Davis, Brody & Assocs.

Built for Mrs. Frank Leslie (of Frank Leslie's Illustrated Weekly), this is a gutsy brick and granite Roman Revival monolith, now happily restored, even up to the cornice. Early M M & W.

[W 9d.] 91 Fifth Avenue (lofts), bet. E. 16th and E. 17th Sts., E side. 1894. Louis Korn.

Six busty caryatids bearing up under the weight of four Corinthian columns and two matching pilasters.

[W 10.] America (restaurant), 9 E. 18th St., bet. Broadway and Fifth Ave. 1985. MGS Architects.

A grand space with a raised and skylit bar that is a stage for the restaurant-tabled audience. Here architecture is space, rather than form. Neon lances itself across the restaurant sky, a colored vibrant sculptured heaven over the pedestrian world below.

Ladies Mile

Between Union and Madison Squares:

The remnants of Ladies Mile are congregated in this area of Broadway. Here the elite shopped, and hence this was a precinct of the carriage trade—a shopping strip of somewhat more elevated snobbery than that enjoyed by Fashion Row, the great Sixth Avenue emporiums in the shadows of the el. The latter might be termed, in contrast, the transit trade, serving in vast department stores great hordes of the middle class. Here along Broadway the shined hooves of curried horses drew the glistening black enamel and leather carriages of Society, traveling from their town houses nearby, past Lord & Taylor, W. & J. Sloane, and their equals, from Union Square to Madison Square. Sadly, these once participants in elegance show their ill-cared-for forms only above the street, where "modern" alterations have defaced what were once grand door-man-guarded entries.

[W 11.] McIntyre Building (lofts), 874 Broadway, NE cor. E. 18th St. 1892. R. H. Robertson.

Unspeakable eclectic: a murmur of Byzantine columns, Romanesque arches, Gothic finials and crockets—the designer used the whole arsenal of history in one shot.

[W 12a.] Originally Arnold Constable Dry Goods Store, 1881-887 Broadway, SW cor. E. 19th St., through to Fifth Ave. with a later entry and address at 115 Fifth Ave, 1869. Extended, 1873, 1877. All by Griffith Thomas.

Lovers of marble walls, cast-iron facades, and mansard roofs, rejoice! There is something here for each of you. The Broadway facade, the oldest, is of marble. The extension to Fifth Avenue, the youngest, is of cast iron, an economical simulation of its adjacent parent. In between, the 2-story miraculous mansard crown rises over the original body and the Fifth Avenue extension. It now houses publishers' offices and menswear outlets.

[W 12b.] Originally W. & J. Sloane Store, 884 Broadway, SE cor. E. 19th St. 1881. W. Wheeler Smith.

Located on Broadway opposite City Hall since 1843, Sloane's moved here (temporarily) before settling on Fifth Avenue and 45th Street. In this substantial structure the firm sold carpeting, Oriental rugs, lace curtains and upholstery fabric. They later expanded to furniture.

Four Squares: see map pp. 170–171 187

Gayle & Gillon, Cast Iron Architecture, 1974, p. 164

Quotes drawn from this page: 35 36 37

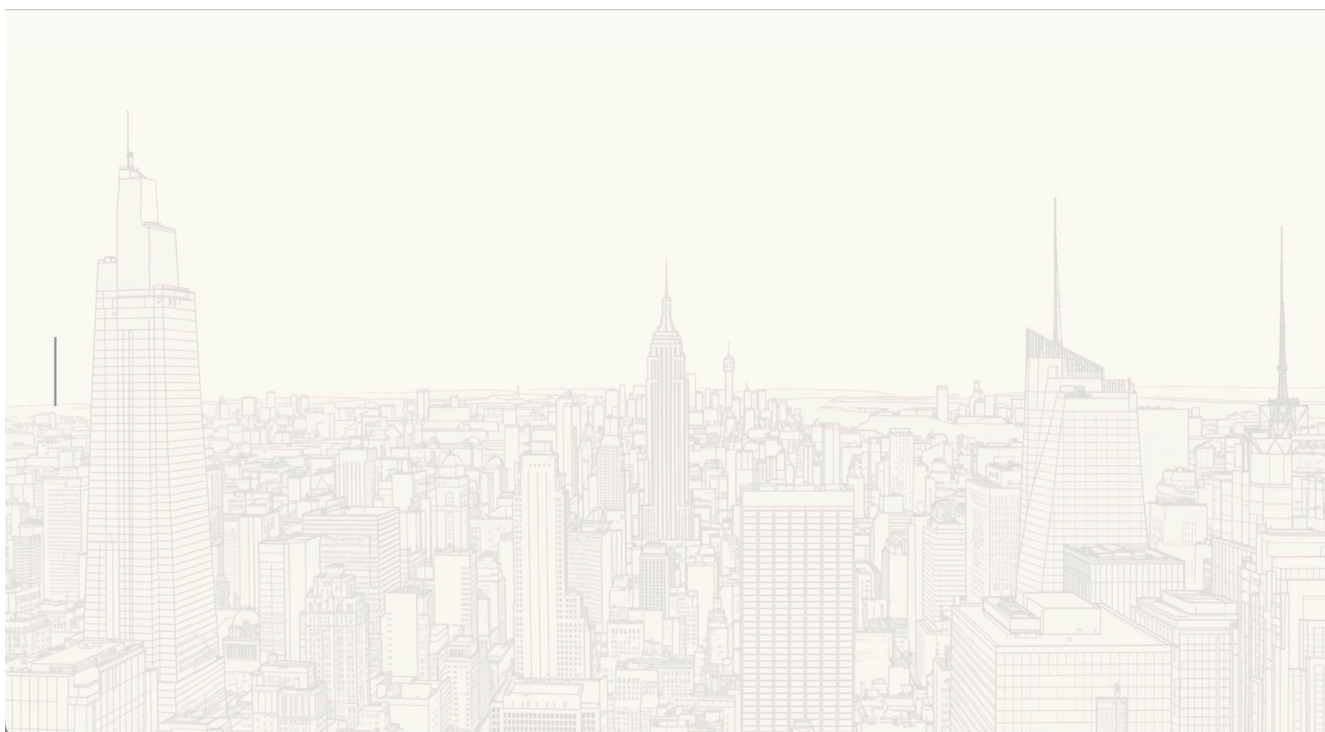

OLD ARNOLD CONSTABLE STORE, 881-887 BROADWAY (1868-1876 Griffith Thomas). The heroic mansard roof is the feature that most often attracts attention to this big Victorian-looking cast-iron building that was once Arnold Constable's dry-goods store at the southeast corner of Fifth Avenue and 19th St. Its main facade, of white marble, was on Broadway at 19th St. The noted architect Griffith Thomas designed it in 1868. Mr. Aaron Arnold thought that marble was the only material suitable for a fine building, and his earlier store, also done in marble by Thomas, can still be seen on the northeast corner of Canal and Mercer Sts. Arnold and his son-in-law James Constable did such a tremendous business in their new Broadway store that they expanded by extending its 19th St. side. Then, to add more floors, the ungainly two-story mansard roof was constructed. Finally, they built all the way to Fifth Avenue and erected there in 1877 an annex for the wholesale departments. Mr. Arnold died at this time, and, interestingly enough, when architect Thomas was called upon to build the Fifth Avenue facade, he recreated the Broadway front, not in marble but in cast iron. It appealed to Constable for reasons of both economy and fire retardation. He continued the dramatic, steep French roof right along 19th St. and around the Fifth Avenue side, where today it is probably the city's largest, most interesting and best-preserved mansard. Arnold Constable's vacated this building when they moved uptown in 1914.

Brown, Valentine's Manual 1921, 1921, p. 99

Quotes drawn from this page: 40 41 42

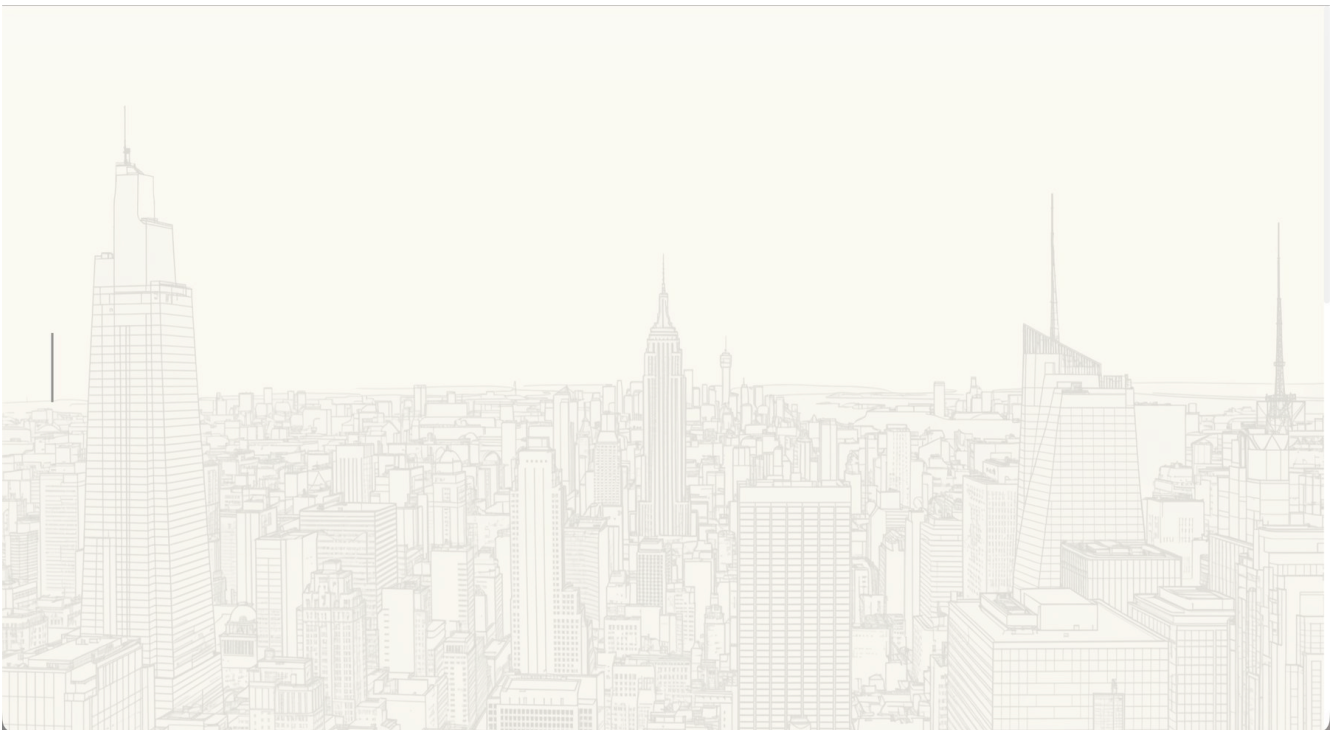

OF OLD NEW YORK

ting forth the particular benefits of purchasing from this enterprising firm. The business was established by Samuel Lord and George H. Taylor in 1830. Mr. Lord lived in the little village of Newtown, L. I., where he had a branch store, and used to drive in every morning in a light wagon, coming over the Greenpoint ferry to Catherine Street. Several changes have taken place in the firm since then. In 1879 Mr. E. P. Hatch became a partner and has remained till the present time the active managing head of the business.

The firm of Arnold & Hearn was established in 1827 by Aaron Arnold, who took his nephew George A. Hearn into partnership with him. Their store was in Canal Street. In 1842 the firm was reorganized, Mr. Hearn going into business with his brother James at 425 Broadway under the style of Hearn Bros., and James M. Constable, a son-in-law of Mr. Arnold, taking his place. The firm was then styled A. Arnold & Co. No further changes took place until 1853 when Richard Arnold, a son of Mr. Arnold, and Joseph P. Baker were admitted to partnership. The firm then became Arnold, Constable & Co. and remains so at the present time. They were located at 311 Canal Street, near Broadway. In 1869, just about the time A. T. Stewart opened his great retail establishment at Ninth Street, Arnold, Constable & Co. moved into the large building at Broadway and Nineteenth Street, where they remained until 1915. During this long period they enjoyed a select class of trade, popularly referred to as "carriage trade." There were others who were favored with this class of business also, but none to the same extent. B. Altman & Co., Stern Bros. and Lord & Taylor had a considerable part of it, and kept

Finney, Time and Again, 1970, p. 179

Quotes drawn from this page: 43 44 45 46 47 48 49

2 ORPHANS, and though I reached for a leaflet I didn't get one, and never did find out what that pair was all about.

At Broadway and Twentieth, passing Lord & Taylor's, we had to stop abruptly to let a procession of two sail past us toward the curb, a really magnificent dowager in a little flat hat tied on with a ribbon in a big bow under her chin, and a long fur-trimmed coat, and followed by a bareheaded man—store manager, floorwalker?—in a morning coat, wing collar, striped pants, and obsequious smile, carrying her packages, the footman of the waiting carriage leaping down to take them. 847.1

At Nineteenth we passed a magnificent store of white marble, and I glanced at a brass sign—one was set into the lower edge of each of the long row of display windows—and it said

ARNOLD CONSTABLE

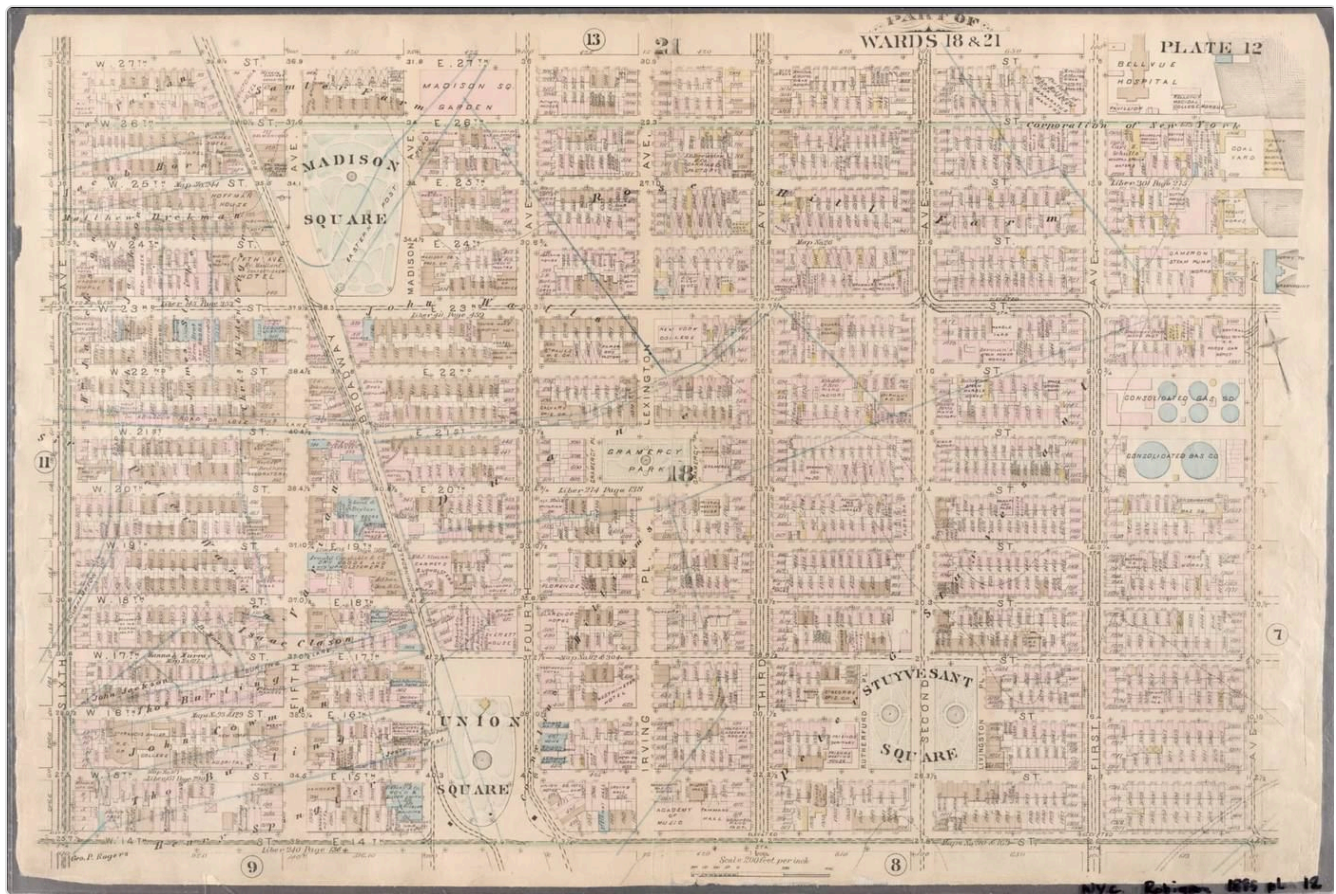

& CO. Beside the store, a middle-aged woman selling toys from a basket sat on a tiny folding campstool next to a flight of stairs.

We passed a man in a dark-blue

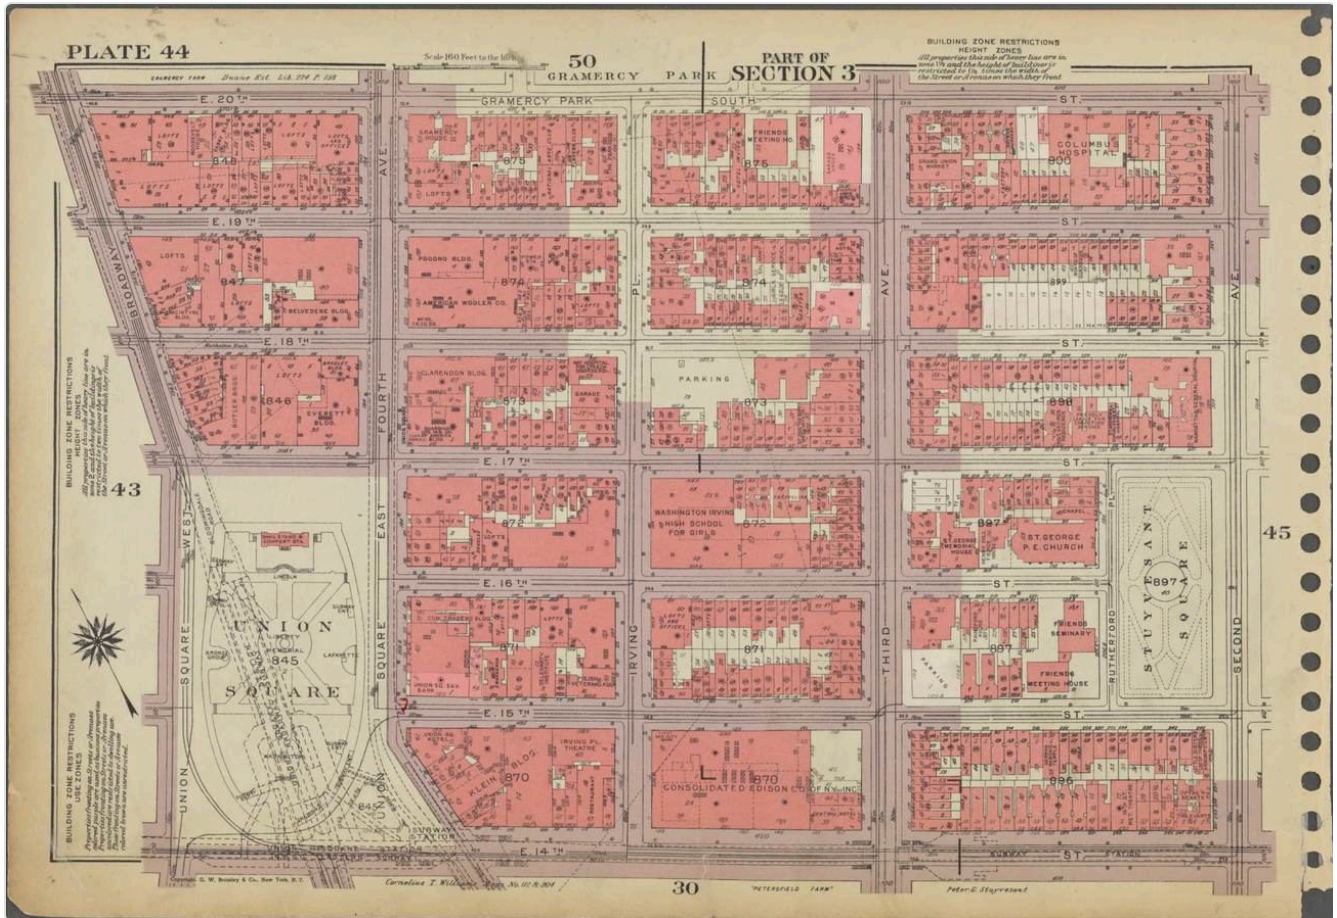

Robinson, 1885 Robinsons Atlas, p. 15

Quotes drawn from this page: 54 55

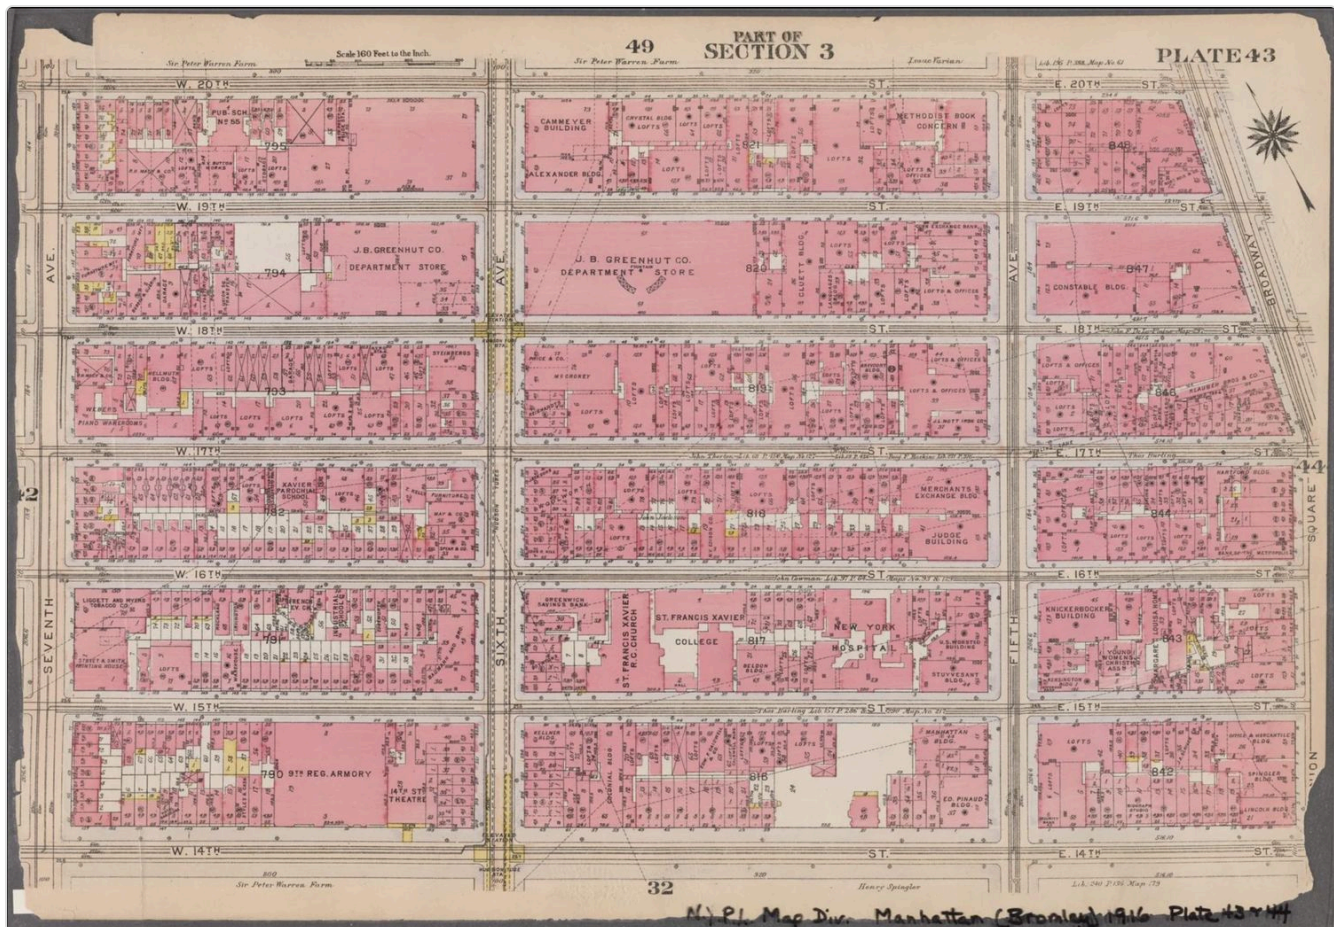

Bromley, 1897 Bromleys Atlas, p. 19

Quotes drawn from this page: 56

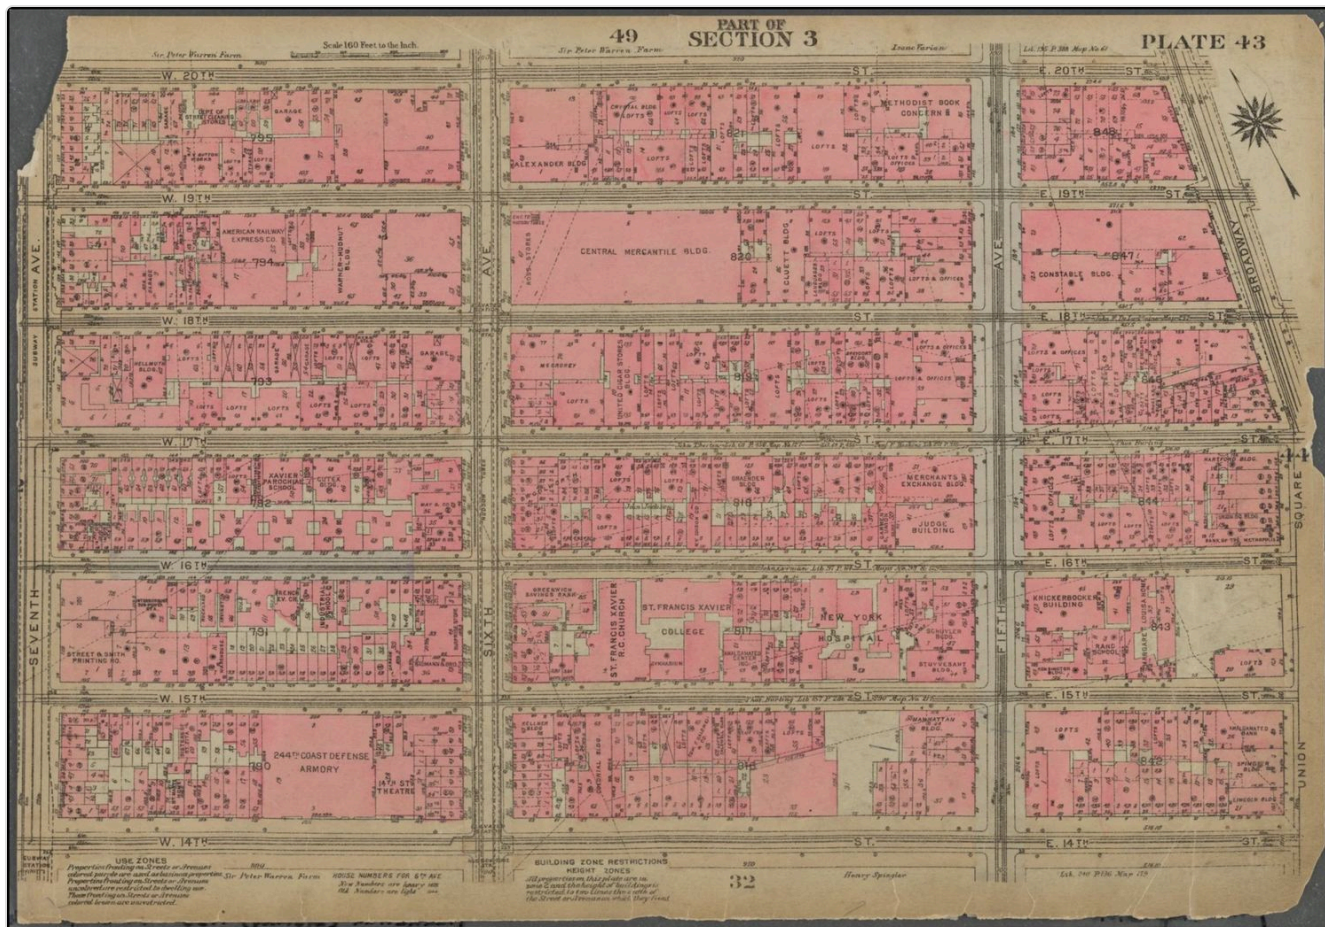

G W Bromley & Co, 1916 Atlas of the Borough of Manhattan, p. 54

Quotes drawn from this page: 57 58

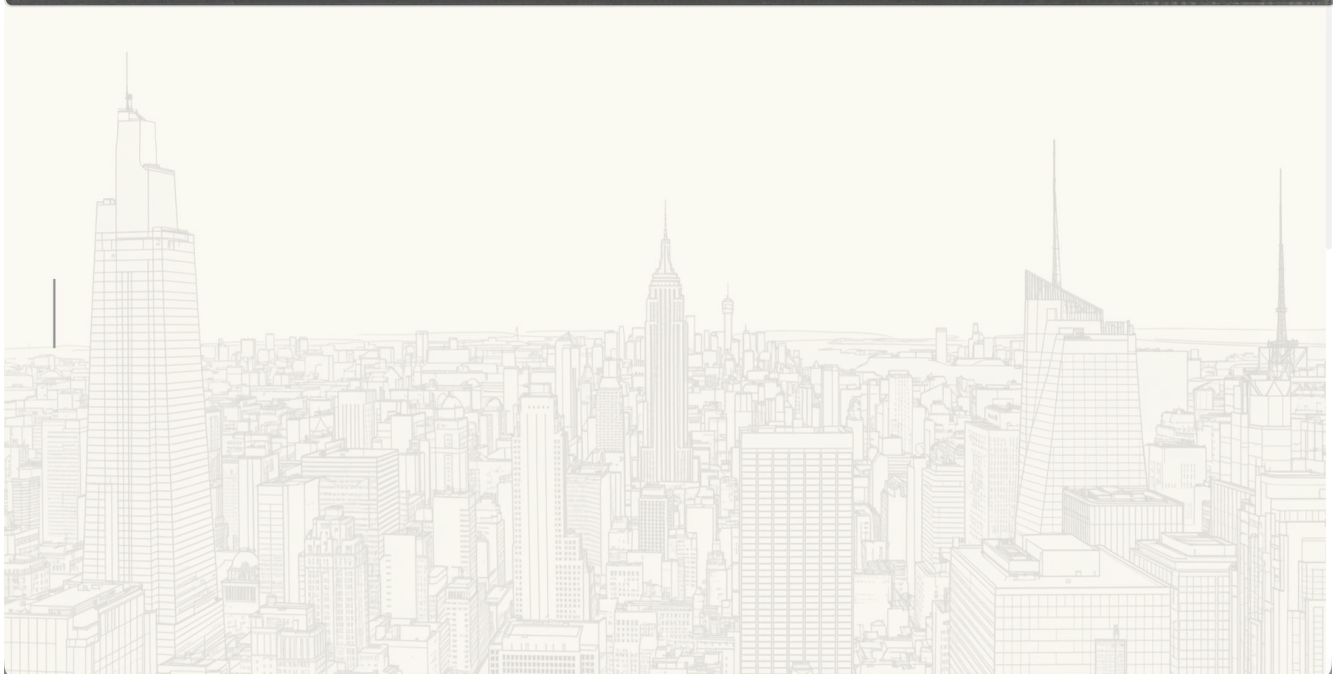

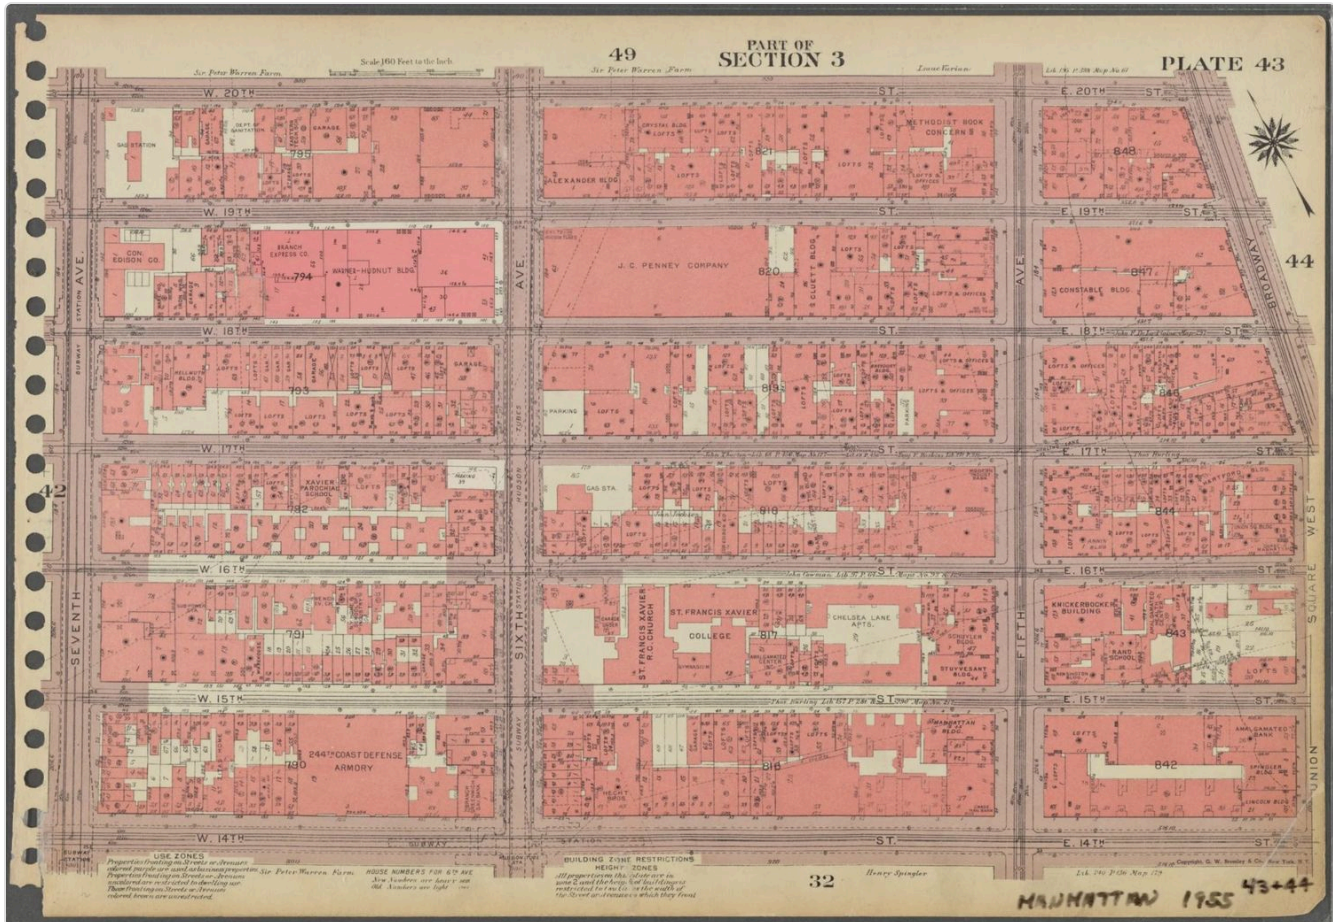

Bromley, 1930 Land Book of the Borough of Manhattan, p. 53

Quotes drawn from this page: 59 60

Bromley, 1955 Manhattan Land Book, p. 43

Quotes drawn from this page: 61 62

Gerds, Impressionist New York, 1994, p. 60

Quotes drawn from this page: 63 64 65 66

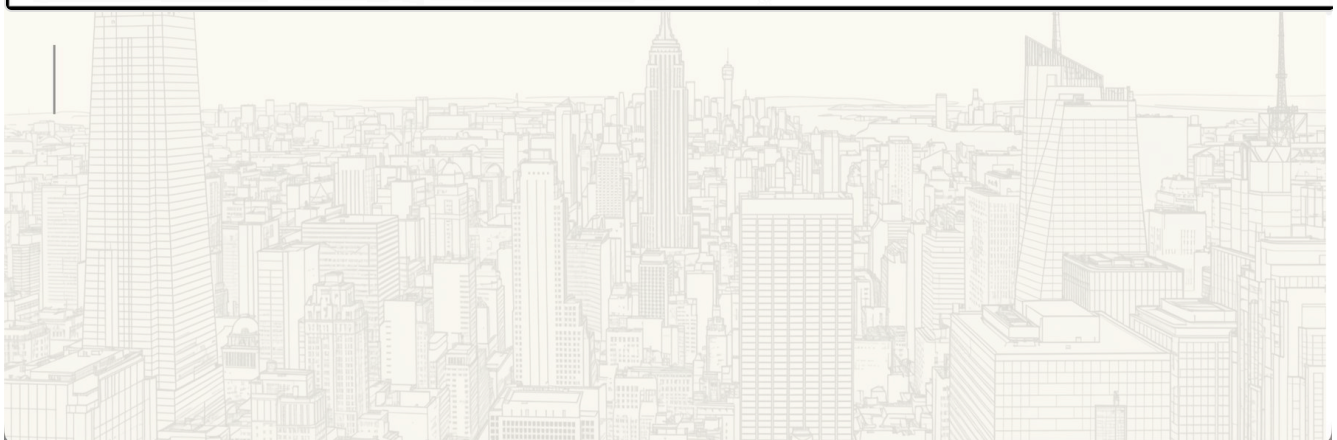

at the left; next to it is George B. Post's Saint Paul Building (1899); across Broadway is Napoleon LeBrun's Home Life Insurance Company (1894), with its peaked mansard; next is the heavy, projecting cornice of the Postal Telegraph Cable Company Building at Murray Street. Farther down Broadway rises Ernest Flagg's forty-seven-story Singer Building at 146 Broadway (1908), which was the city's tallest for a short time until the construction of the fifty-two-story Metropolitan Life Tower at Madison Avenue and Twenty-fourth Street, in 1909, and then the Woolworth Building. The soaring vertical thrust of the skyscrapers is countered both by the verdant park at lower left and by the steam clouds throughout the picture that break up the sharp architectural lines.²⁷ Cooper celebrated the New New York, which gleams in bright sunlight, while behind the park the older, squat, enormous City Hall Post Office (built in Second Empire style by A. B. Mullett in 1875) is in shadow, its cupola almost hidden by the steam. 87

In his earlier Broadway from the Post-Office (plate 40), made before the construction of the Woolworth Building, Cooper concentrated on the narrower chasm of Broadway, where sunlight barely filters through among the skyscrapers, dominated here by the Singer Building though again eased by the ubiquitous steam clouds. This is the Broadway so frequently referred to as a "cañon." The extreme verticality of both of Cooper's pictures underscores the vertical growth along the thoroughfare. Discussing his images such as Broadway from the Post-Office, Cooper used the musical analogies that were then rife in aesthetic theory: "Here in New York it [the meter] is tuned to a quicker, more strident music. . . . Yes, in the last analysis, the supreme thing that New York says to me is: 'I sing.'"²⁸

By the second half of the nineteenth century Broadway from Fourteenth to Twenty-third Street was the heart of Ladies Mile. It was the center for hotels, theaters, galleries, and clubs, and for the major retail outlets—Brooks Brothers, Lord and Taylor Drygoods, W. J. Sloane Carpets, Arnold Constable, and many others. By the early twentieth century many of these prestigious companies had abandoned Broadway for Fifth Avenue: in 1914 Arnold Constable, built in 1868–69 at 881 Broadway at East Nineteenth Street, moved to Fifth Avenue near Fortieth Street; and Lord and Taylor, completed in 1872 at 901 Broadway at Twentieth Street, moved to Thirty-eighth Street.²⁹ A photograph of Broadway and Twenty-third Street (plate 41), taken about 1890, documents both the small businesses just below Twenty-third Street and the old,

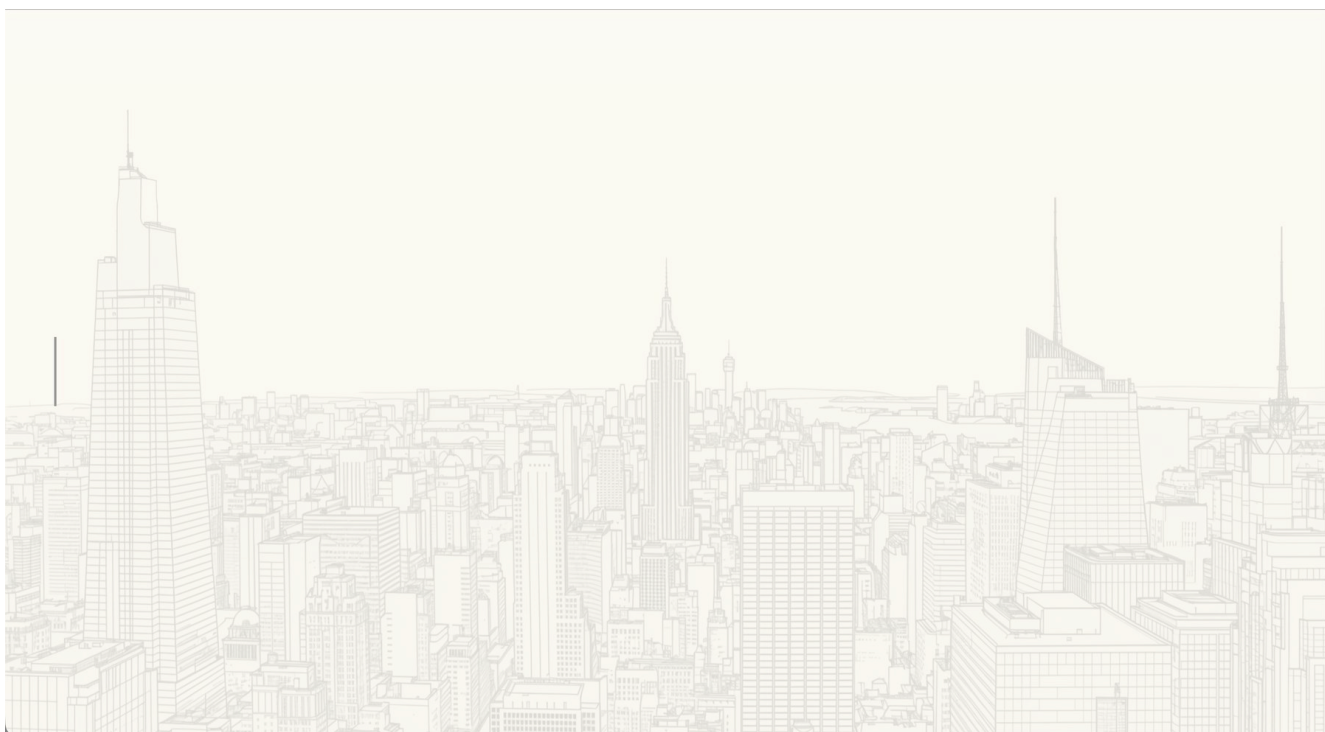

40. Colin Campbell Cooper (1856–1937).
Broadway from the Post-Office, from Louis Baury,
"The Message of Manhattan," Bookman, August 1911.

Wolfe, New York 15 Walking Tours, 2003, p. 248

Quotes drawn from this page: 68 69

ness, but stayed with William for only nine years. At the closing of the 1876 Centennial Exposition in Philadelphia, William Sloane purchased a superb collection of Oriental rugs that had been a major display at the Fair, offering them to his growing list of wealthy clients. This marked the first time Oriental rugs were sold by a retail house. In the meantime, he had moved up Broadway twice, keeping abreast of the familiar northward push, and a few years later accomplished another "first," contracting with a weaving firm in India to become the only American rug store with its own Oriental source of supply.

William Sloane achieved fame of another sort a few years earlier, when the criminal jury of which he was foreman convicted "Boss" Tweed. While on the jury he learned that merchant-prince A. T. Stewart was about to foreclose a mortgage on the Alexander Smith Carpet Company in Yonkers, N.Y. Sloane raised the money, saved the Smith Company, and in return received an interest and became its exclusive agent for many years. On his death in 1879, the firm's direction was taken over by his eldest son, John II. It was under John Sloane that the company achieved its greatest growth, inaugurating in 1881 the large store across the street from Arnold Constable and an equally spacious outlet in San Francisco. W. & J. Sloane achieved national fame with a contract to carpet some of the swankiest hotels in the city, including the newly opened Waldorf-Astoria on 34th Street; and the company won international fame with the commission to supply all the carpeting for the coronation of Czar Nicholas II. At the same time, the store expanded its operations into home decoration, selling antiques, and manufacturing "registered reproductions" of antique furniture. The building was designed by W. Wheeler Smith and erected in 1881.

As the gaslit era waned, Sloane's moved in 1912 to Fifth Avenue and 47th Street, where they remained until 1962. In a subsequent move down the avenue to 38th Street, they sold their building to discount merchandiser E. J. Korvette, acquiring the store formerly occupied by Franklin Simon; and in a late 1982 move, Sloane's abandoned their Fifth Avenue address for an adjacent smaller location farther west on 38th Street. Two years later they closed their store and moved operations to the three W. & J. Sloane suburban stores. Interestingly, the present owner of the 881 Broadway store is also a rug and carpet retailer, and has restored the exterior and interior to re-create the aura of elegance of the 1880s.

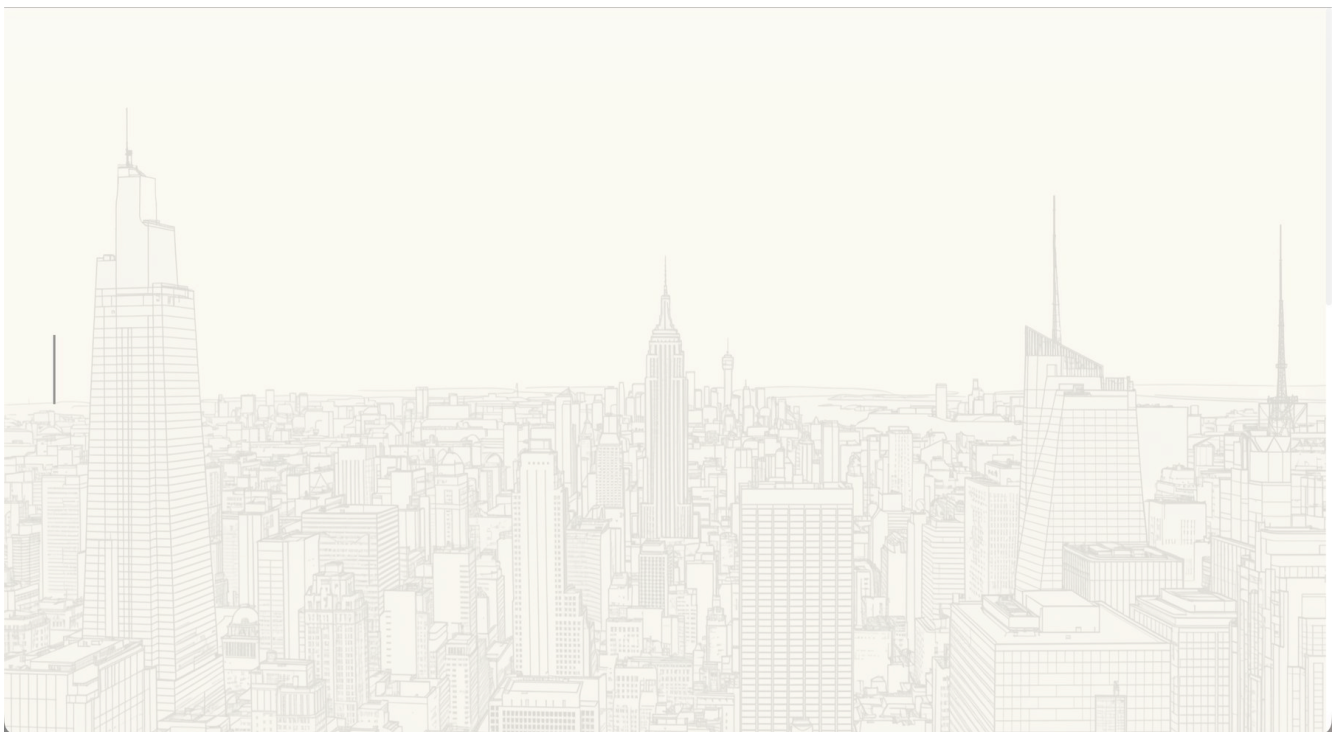

Find the "S" monogram on a small cast-iron shield set high on the building, as well as the date of construction in terra-cotta Roman numerals. 847.2

At the northeast corner of Broadway and East 18th Street rises the rather unusual McIntyre Building (R. H. Robertson, 1890), a prominent feature in the area. Built as lofts and commercial space in this once-busy commercial neighborhood, the ten-story dark-red-brick-and-limestone Romanesque Revival-style building boasts a distinctive square tower topped by a pyramidal roof and sharply pitched gables.

End of tour. You may, however, want to enjoy the “Stroll around Union Square” that follows. The 4, 5, 6, L, N, Q, R, W subway lines are at 14th Street.

Trow, Trows New York City Directory, 1865, p. 1025

Quotes drawn from this page: 72

HASWELL BROTHERS,
100 WEST STREET, NEW YORK,
RAILROAD AND STEAMER SUPPLIES,
ENGINEERS' STORES AND TOOLS OF ALL DESCRIPTIONS, OIL, TALLOW, WASTE;
Hemp, Cotton and Rubber Packing; Hammers, Screw Punches, Files, Chisels, &c.
Steam Vacuum and Water Gauges, &c., &c. Boiler
Felting, Bolts, Nuts and Washers.

HARRISON & BROTHER,
Dealers in
ENGINEERS' AND STEAMSHIP SUPPLIES,
Coal Oil, Tallow, Cop Waste, Lamps, Lanterns,
Portable Forges, Tools, Bolts, Gauges, Sheet Rubber,
Piston, Jute and Cotton Packing, Patent Cordage,
Blocks, Pumps, &c., &c.
261 WEST STREET,
Bet. Light and Vestry Sta., New York.

ENGRAVERS.

A. DEMAREST,
GENERAL ENGRAVER,
182 BROADWAY,
New York.

Wedding, Visiting and Business Cards, Door Plates,
Seals and Presses, Stamps, &c., &c.

GILBERT HICKS,
ENGRAVER & PRINTER,
No. 11 Madison Street,
Cor. Roosevelt Street, New York.
Wedding, Visiting, and Business Cards, &c., &c.
Seals, Door Plates and Jewelry neatly Engraved.

HENRY HOLTON
DESIGNER & ENGRAVER
ON WOOD
32 John Street
NEW YORK

JACOB HYATT,
(Formerly Stout & Hyatt, many years cor. Maiden Lane and Broadway.)
CARD, SEAL AND GENERAL ENGRAVER,
13 JOHN ST., near Broadway, New York.
ALWAYS on hand a very choice assortment of Cards, Envelopes, Seals, Door Plates, &c.
J. H. received the Highest Premium of the New York Crystal Palace.

WATERS & SON,
DESIGNERS, ENGRAVERS AND PHOTOGRAPHERS ON WOOD,
No. 90 FULTON STREET, NEW YORK.
WOOD CUTS of all manufactured articles, Carriages, Machinery, Book Illustrations, Diagrams, Landscapes, Medical Illustrations, &c.
TINTED ENVELOPES DESIGNED AND ENGRAVED.
PICTURES ENLARGED OR REDUCED.

W. G. JACKMAN,
PORTRAIT, HISTORICAL AND LANDSCAPE
ENGRAVER,
In Line, Stipple and Mezzotinto,
835 BROADWAY, Room 92, NEW YORK.
Refers to D. Appleton & Co., Harper & Brothers and A. S. Barnes & Co.

KELLY & RIDLEY,
GENERAL ENGRAVERS
AND PRINTERS,
87 FULTON STREET,
NEW YORK.

JOSEPH KELLY, SAMUEL C. RIDLEY.

MARCHAND & SCHWITTER,
WATCH CASE, LETTERS & JEWELRY
ENGRAVERS,
No. 81 NASSAU STREET,
Third Floor, Rear Building, NEW YORK.
Engraving for Enamelling done in the finest style.
JULIUS MARCHAND, GEORGE SCHWITTER.

J. W. MORSE & CO.,
Designers & Engravers
ON WOOD,
15 NASSAU STREET,
Third Floor, NEW YORK.

H. F. STEINECKE,
46 BEEKMAN STREET,
New York.
ENGRAVER, EMBOSSEUR AND MANUFACTURER
OF SUPERIOR STAMPING INK & BOXES
Initials stamped on Paper and Envelopes in a superior style in Gold and Silver, and all colors, without extra charge for Dies.

Francis, Architects in Practice New York City, 1979, p. 33

Quotes drawn from this page: 73

MANHATTAN-BRONX

GALBRAITH, JOHN
1876 301 W. 50th
1887 v. R.L. Darragh & Co.

GALLAUNER, EDWARD
Dgw. RW: Cathedral, Bridgeport, Ct.
(1899-1901)
1898- 1 Madison av.

GALLIER, JAMES SR. (1798-1868)
W1
1833-4 v. Lafever & Gallier
1835 Grand n. Wooster

GALLIER, JOHN
1844 552 Broadway
1846 548 Broadway

GAMBRILL, CHARLES DEXTER (1832-1880)
FAIA 1858-
W1, AOI
1861-7 v. Gambrill & Post
1865 111 Broadway
1868-78 v. Gambrill & Richardson
1871 6 Hanover
1879 57 Broadway
1880 v. Gambrill & Ficken

GAMBRILL & FICKEN
Charles D. Gambrill, H. Edwards Ficken
1880 57 Broadway

GAMBRILL & POST
Charles D. Gambrill, George B. Post
1861 93 Liberty
1862-4 19 Nassau
1865 544 Broadway
1866-7 6 Hanover

GAMBRILL & RICHARDSON
(C.D.G. & H.H.R.) Est'd. 6 years. Good connection (1873)
Charles D. Gambrill, H'y H. Richardson
W1
1868-70 6 Hanover
1871-8 57 Broadway

GANDOLFO, EMANUEL
1882-9 31 Union Sq. W.

GANDOLFO, EVERETT E.
Dgw. RW: Yale Gymnasium, New Haven, Conn.
(1899-1901)
1890-93 31 Union Sq. W.
1893- 96 5th av.

GANNON, MARY N.
1897- v. Gannon & Hands

GANNON & HANDS
Mary N. Gannon, Alice J. Hands
1897 200 W. 23rd
1897-1900 16 E. 23rd
1900 13 W. 18th

GARDINER, EDWARD
FAIA 1857-, Charter, Lapsed; ASCE,
Charter
1853-4 341 4th av.
1855-7 111 Broadway

GARDINER, PERRY G.
1864 12 Pine

GARDINER, THOMAS
1853 8 & 10 E. 19th

GARDINER, WILLIAM W.
1856-66 8-10 E. 19th
1867 119 Broadway
1868-9 907 Broadway
1875-6 Washington av. n. 170th
1877-9 Washington av. n. 169th
1883-91 1364 Washington av.

GARDNER, H.
1894 280 Broadway

GARDNER, ROBERT WATERMAN (1866-1937)
AL 1894-5
WMAA, AOI, W1
1894-5 114 5th av.

GARDNER, WILLIAM
Naval
1888-91 1 Broadway
1891-2 19 Whitehall
1893-5 v. Gardner & Mosher
1895- v. Gardner & Cox

GARDNER & COX
William Gardner, Irving Cox
Naval
1895- 1 Broadway

GARDNER & MOSHER
William Gardner, Chas. D. Mosher
Naval
1893-5 1 Broadway, Washington Bldg.,
Room 99

GAREISS, AUGUSTUS JR.
1888 331 Willis av.

GARNSEY, ELMER ELSWORTH (1863-1946)
S: decorative work (1901)
AL 1894-
AOI
1895 74 Washington Sq. S.
1898-9 80 Washington Sq. E.
1900 489 5th av.

GARSWAY, L.
1892 101 E. 92nd

GARVEY, JOHN
1846 r. 592 Broadway
1850 813 Broadway

GARVIN, MICHAEL J.
Dgw. RW: Hotel, cor. Pelham av. and So.
Boulevard (1899-1901)
1885 v. Schmidt & Garvin
1887-8, 3311 3rd av.
1891-7 3311 3rd av.
1898- 3307 3rd av.

GAUNT, THOMAS
1888, 1890 v. Gaunt & Martinez
1891 115 Broadway

GAUNT & MARTINEZ
T. Gaunt, M.J. Martinez
1888, 1890 115 Broadway

GAVIGAN, AMBROSE A.
1894-5 835 Broadway

GAVIGAN, JAMES J.F.
Dgw. RW: Second German Baptist Church,
Cherokee Club (1900-1)
1892, 835 Broadway
1894-7 835 Broadway
1898- 1123 Broadway
1899-1900 v. Higgs & Gavigan

GAYLE, EDWARD W.
1899- v. Brower & Gayle

GAYNOR, JOHN P.
1856-9 16 Nassau
1857 v. Brooklyn
1859 953 Broadway
1860-2 182 Broadway

GEER, SETH SR.
1844 84 Merchants Exchange
1845-7 27 Wall

GEGAN, WILLIAM
HD: P.F. Brogan (1899)

GELLATLY, JOHN
AL 1885-
1888 111 Broadway

GEORGES, ANTHONY
1893 321 E. 117th

GEORGI, EDWIN C.
1900 83 East End av.

GERBER, FREDERICK
1900 340 E. 119th

GESCHIEDT, MORRIS
1848 5 Broad
1849-54, 11 Wall
1856-64 11 Wall
1855-60, v. Brooklyn
1866 v. Brooklyn
1867 51 William

GESSAWAY,
1892 101 E. 92nd

GIBBONS, HENRY W.
Greenhouses
1898- 136 Liberty

GIBBS, CHARLES E.
1881-5 v. Starkweather & Gibbs

GIBBS, JAMES
1874 71 Broadway

GIBBS, JOHN
1854 v. Fisher & Gibbs

GIBBS, JOHN L.
1898 220 Broadway
1899- 68 New Chambers

GIBBS, WILLIAM E.
1888 16 Exchange pl.

GIBLIN, MICHAEL
1887-8 1215 2nd av.

GIBSON, ROBERT WILLIAMS (1854-1927)
Architect, The Clearing House, U.S. Trust
Co., Botanical Museum, etc. Treas.
Architectural League (1897) (1896-9)
[port]
Dfgw. RW: N.Y. Clearing House; Onondaga
Bank, Syracuse, N.Y. (1899-1900)
FAIA 1885-, NYC, AIA 1888-, AL 1888-
AAA, W1
1888-90 38 Park Row, 327 Potter Bldg.
1890-7 18 Wall
1898- 54 Broad

GIBSON, WILLIAM
Stained glass & architectural decorations
(1866)
1853-7 374-376 Broadway
1866-9, Broadway c. E. 13th, Gibson's
Building
1872 Broadway c. E. 13th, Gibson's
Building

Frank, Where to Find It Buy It Eat It In New York, 1980, p. 359

Quotes drawn from this page: 74

- Jewelry, vintage costume: Deco Jewels (131 Thompson St)
Jewels, rare and historic: Edith Weber & Associates (994 Madison Ave)
Kimonos: Kimono House (131 Thompson St)
Knit suits, sportswear: Sam's Knitwear (93 Orchard St)
Leather, jackets & wallets, men's & women's: Rugby North America (115 Mercer St)
Leather goods: Dooney & Bourke (20 E 60th St), Il Bisonte (120 Sullivan St), and René (1007 Madison Ave)
Lingerie (discounted): Orchard Corset (157 Orchard St) and Howard Sportswear (85 Orchard St)
Lingerie, fine: The Bra Smyth (905 Madison Ave)
Lingerie, sexy: Victoria's Secret (34 E 57th St, 1240 Third Ave, 115 Fifth Ave, 565 Broadway, and other locations)
Massage oils: Fragrance Shoppe (21 E 7th St)
Millinery, one-of-a-kind: Kelly Christy (235 Elizabeth St)
Outdoor wear: Eastern Mountain Sports (20 W 61st St)
Pashmina: ABH Design (160 E 56th St)
Pearls: Sanko Cultured Pearls & J. Haas, Inc (45 W 47th St, 212/819-0585; by appointment: Mon-Fri: 9-5)
Perfume: Helmut Lang Parfumerie (81 Greene St), Warwick Chemists (826 Seventh Ave), and a cluster of stores on lower Broadway between 25th and 31st streets
Perfume copies: Essential Products (90 Water St)
Perfume (discounted): R.S.V. Trading (49 W 27th St)
Prescriptions: J. Leon Lascoff & Sons (1209 Lexington Ave)
Resale, women's designer: Kavanagh's (146 E 49th St) and New & Almost New (65 Mercer St)
Sandals: Barbara Shaum (60 E 4th St)
Sandals, handmade: Jutta Neumann (317 E 9th St)
Secondhand items, unusual: Out of the Closet Thrift Shop (220 E 81st St)
Sewing patterns: P&S Fabrics (355 Broadway)
Shaving products: The Art of Shaving (141 E 62nd St and 373 Madison Ave)
Shirts, custom-made: Arthur Gluck Shirtmaker (47 W 57th St)
Shirts, men's Italian (great prices): Acorn Shirts (54 W 21st St, 4th floor, 212/366-1185; call ahead)
Shoes, adult comfort: David Z (655 Ave of the Americas, 556 Broadway, 384 Fifth Ave, and other locations)
Shoes, big sizes: Tall Size Shoes (3 W 35th St)
Shoes, bridal: Peter Fox (105 Thompson St)
Shoes, children's party (discounted): Trevi Shoes (141 Orchard St)
Shoes, children's upscale: East Side Kids (1298 Madison Ave), Harry's

Shoes (2299 Broadway), and Shoofly (465 Amsterdam Ave)
Shoes (discounted): Stapleton Shoe Company (68 Trinity Pl)
Shoes, men's and women's (good value): Co-Pilot (645 Broadway)
Shoes, men's and women's custom-made: Oberle Custom Shoes/Mathias
Bootmaker (56 W 45th St, Room 704, 212/391-9660; by appointment: 12-4)
Shoes, Mephisto: Footlight Shoes (1062 Third Ave)
Shoes, non-leather: MooShoes (207 E 26th St)
Shoes, walking: Footlight Shoes (1062 Third Ave)
Sneakers, limited edition: Alife Rivington Club (158 Rivington St)
Sneakers, men's and women's (discounted): Shoe City (120 Nassau St)

Jackson, The Encyclopedia of New York, 2010, p. 55

Quotes drawn from this page: 75

Largest Architecture Firms in New York City

Name and Address	Founded	No. New York Architects, 2008/2007	Total Construction Volume (in millions)	No. New York Area Projects	2008 Area Projects Total Square Footage (in millions)	Notable New York Area Projects and Clients
Perkins Eastman, 115 Fifth Ave.	1981	161/182	$4,500.0	200	5.8	TKTS booth; Sky View Parc
Gensler Architecture, Design and Planning, 1230 Sixth Ave.	1965	158/139	$16,600.0	1037	20.9	St. John's University; Ogilvy
Kohn Pedersen Fox Associates, 111 West 57th St.	1976	146/139	N/D	N/D	N/D	Related Companies; Port Authority of New York and New Jersey
HOK, 620 Sixth Ave.	1955	130/142	$13,000.0	92	N/A	Canon USA headquarters; SUNY Downstate Medical Center
Skidmore, Owings and Merrill, 14 Wall St.	1936	90/92	N/A	181	N/A	Multipurpose building at the New School; Katz Women's Hospital at LIJ Medical Center
RMJM, 275 Seventh Ave.	1956	87/88	N/A	65	N/A	East River Science Park; Gouverneur Healthcare Services
Polshak Partnership Architects, 320 West 13th St.	1963	77/67	$500.0	45	0.2	Weill Cornell Medical College's Biomedical Research Building; Staten Island Courthouse
Perkins + Will, 215 Park Ave. South	1935	71/52	$5,097.4	24	0.1	NYU's Leonard Stern School of Business; United Nations Capital Master Plan
HLW, 115 Fifth Ave.	1885	65/65	$700.0	135	3.0	Google; Nassau County Courthouse
Ismael Leyva Architects, 48 West 37th St.	1996	60/99	N/D	11	1.4	785 Eighth Ave; Yves at 166 W. 18th St.
Spector Group, 19 West 44th St.	1965	58/57	$595.0	109	3.6	NASDAQ Stock Market; New Jersey School Construction Authority
NBBJ, 2 Rector St.	1943	56/54	$9,400.0	N/D	N/D	N/D
Cetra/Ruddy Inc., 583 Broadway	1991	56/73	$752.0	3	2.8	1 Madison Park; Audubon Sanctuary
FXFOWLE Architects, 22 West 19th St.	1978	56/74	$650.0	60	4.0	11 Times Square; Lincoln Center redevelopment—Alice Tully Hall
GreenbergFarrow, 44 West 28th St.	1971	55/85	N/D	85	N/D	East River Plaza; Fordham Place
Cooper, Robertson and Partners, 311 West 43rd St.	1979	51/58	$305.0	25	0.004	Hunter College School of Social Work; Whitney Museum expansion
Swanke Hayden Connell Architects, 295 Lafayette St.	1906	50/52	N/A	75	2.5	Moody's; Federated Department Stores
Robert A. M. Stern Architects, 460 West 34th St.	1977	50/53	$1,464.1	44	0.9	15 Central Park West; Kaufman Center
Beyer Blinder Belle Architects and Planners, 41 East 11th St.	1968	48/51	$407.0	159	0.6	New York City Hall; Cooper-Hewitt National Design Museum
Mancini•Duffy, 39 West 13th St.	1955	42/68	$725.0	208	N/A	Cushman and Wakefield; Fitzpatrick Cella Harper and Scinto
Gruzen Samton, 320 West 13th St.	1936	42/39	$16.0	210	1.2	Academic and laboratory building at Cooper Union; El Museo del Barrio

(continued)

Frank, Where to Find It Buy It Eat It In New York, 1980, p. 522

Quotes drawn from this page: 77

Sony Wonder Technology Lab—550 Madison Avenue, 212/833-8100

South Street Seaport—Located at the east end of Fulton Street (212/732-7678), the seaport has a seasonal schedule of activities for children and families, plus a special interactive museum for children.

Statue of Liberty—On Liberty Island in New York Harbor, off Battery Park

United Nations—The visitors' entrance is on First Avenue, between 45th and 46th streets (212/963-7713). Strollers are not allowed on the grounds and children under five cannot go on the tour.

Restaurants

America—A big restaurant (9 E 18th St, 212/505-2110) with large portions and heaps of French fries.

Avenue—This Upper West Side favorite (520 Columbus Ave, 212/579-3194) even has a baby-food menu!

Barking Dog Luncheonette—Good food and lots of canine knick-knacks to look at in these popular Upper East Side spots (1678 Third Ave, 212/831-1800 and 1453 York Ave, 212/861-3600).

Brooklyn Diner USA—One of many theme restaurants in Manhattan, Brooklyn Diner USA (212 W 57th St, 212/977-1957) has basic diner foods that will make kids happy and parents nostalgic.

Bubby's—This kid-friendly bastion of southern cooking in Tribeca (120 Hudson St, 212/219-0666) has great ambience and food. Be sure to save room for dessert.

Carnegie Delicatessen and Restaurant—Expect huge portions, rude waiters, and bench seats at this bustling New York institution (854 Seventh Ave, 212/757-2245).

Cowgirl—Small children can be entertained for hours looking at the walls of this low-key spot at 519 Hudson Street in the West Village. Call 212/633-1133 for more information.

EJ's Luncheonette—Friendly neighborhood places with basic food at good prices (447 Amsterdam Ave, 212/873-3444; 1271 Third Ave, 212/472-0600; and 432 Ave of the Americas, 212/473-5555).

Ellen's Stardust Diner—There isn't great dining in Times Square, but this Broadway diner is a fun spot (150 Broadway, 212/056-5151).

Broadway and is a fun spot (100 Broadway, 212/758-5151).

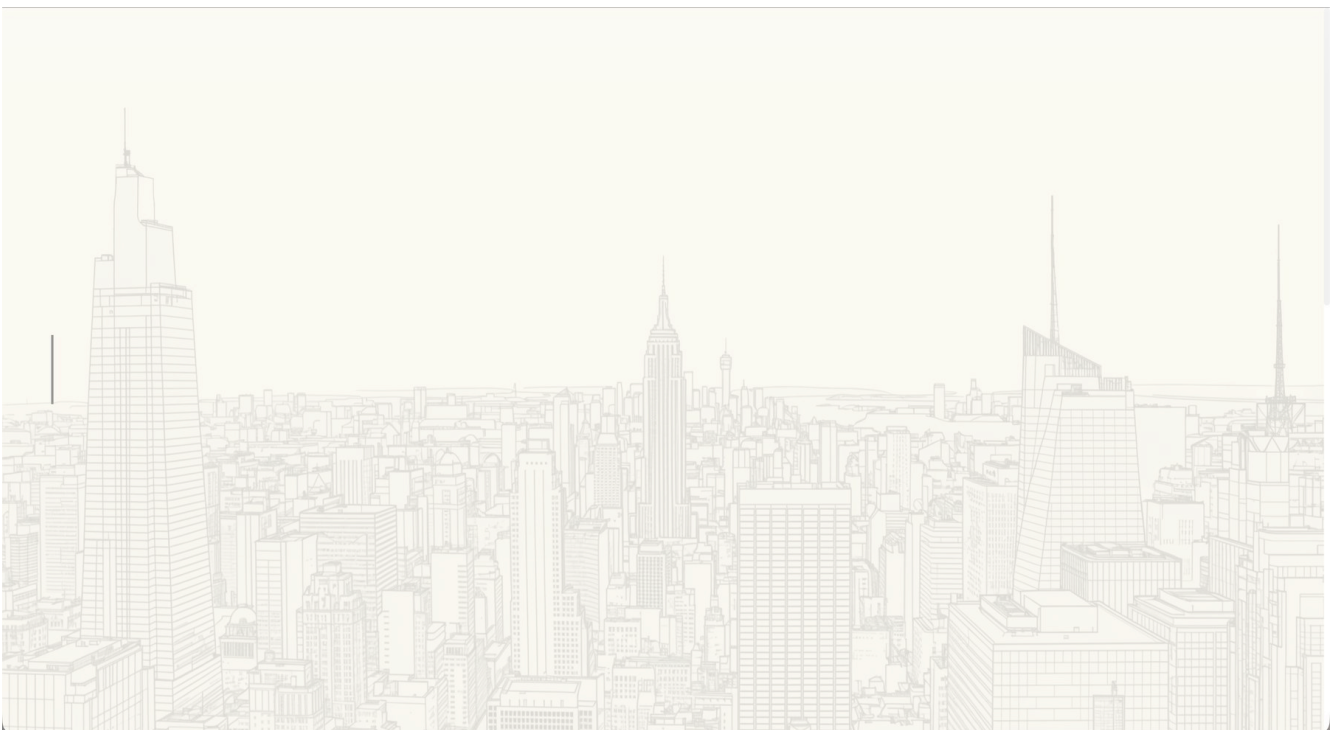

ESPN Zone—Sports, sports, sports! This Times Square play space (1472 Broadway, 212/921-3776) gets a little rowdy at night.

Gray's Papaya—Cheap, tasty hot dogs and more are served at this hurried, downscale spot at the corner of Broadway and 72nd Street (212/799-0243).

Jackson Hole Burgers—You'll get great, juicy hamburgers and lots of thick fries and onion rings at this restaurant, which has several locations, including 232 East 64th Street (212/371-7187).

Frank, Where to Find It Buy It Eat It In New York, 1980, p. 25

Quotes drawn from this page: 78 79

Paola's (245 E 84th St): Italian, Sunday	148
Park Avenue Cafe (100 E 63rd St): American, Sunday	148
Payard Patisserie (1032 Lexington Ave): French	150
Pinocchio (1748 First Ave): Italian, Sunday	151
Post House (Lowell Hotel, 28 E 63rd St): Steak, Sunday	153
Primavera (1578 First Ave): Italian, Sunday	153
Rain (1059 Third Ave): Thai-Vietnamese, Sunday	154
RM (33 E 60th St): Seafood	157
Sarabeth's at the Whitney (Whitney Museum of American Art, 945 Madison Ave): American-Continental, Sunday	160
Sarabeth's Kitchen (1295 Madison Ave): American-Continental, Sunday	160
Serendipity 3 (225 E 60th St): American, Sunday	162
Sette Mezzo (969 Lexington Ave): Italian, Sunday	162
Sistina (1555 Second Ave): Italian, Sunday	164
Taste (1411 Third Ave): American, Sunday	167
Tony's Di Napoli (1606 Second Ave): Italian, Sunday	170
Vinegar Factory (431 E 91st St): American, Sunday	174
Vivolo (140 E 74th St): Italian, Sunday	175

EAST VILLAGE

Danal (90 E 10th St): French, Sunday	108
I Coppi (432 E 9th St): Italian, Sunday	122
Second Avenue Kosher Delicatessen and Restaurant (156 Second Ave): Deli, Sunday	162

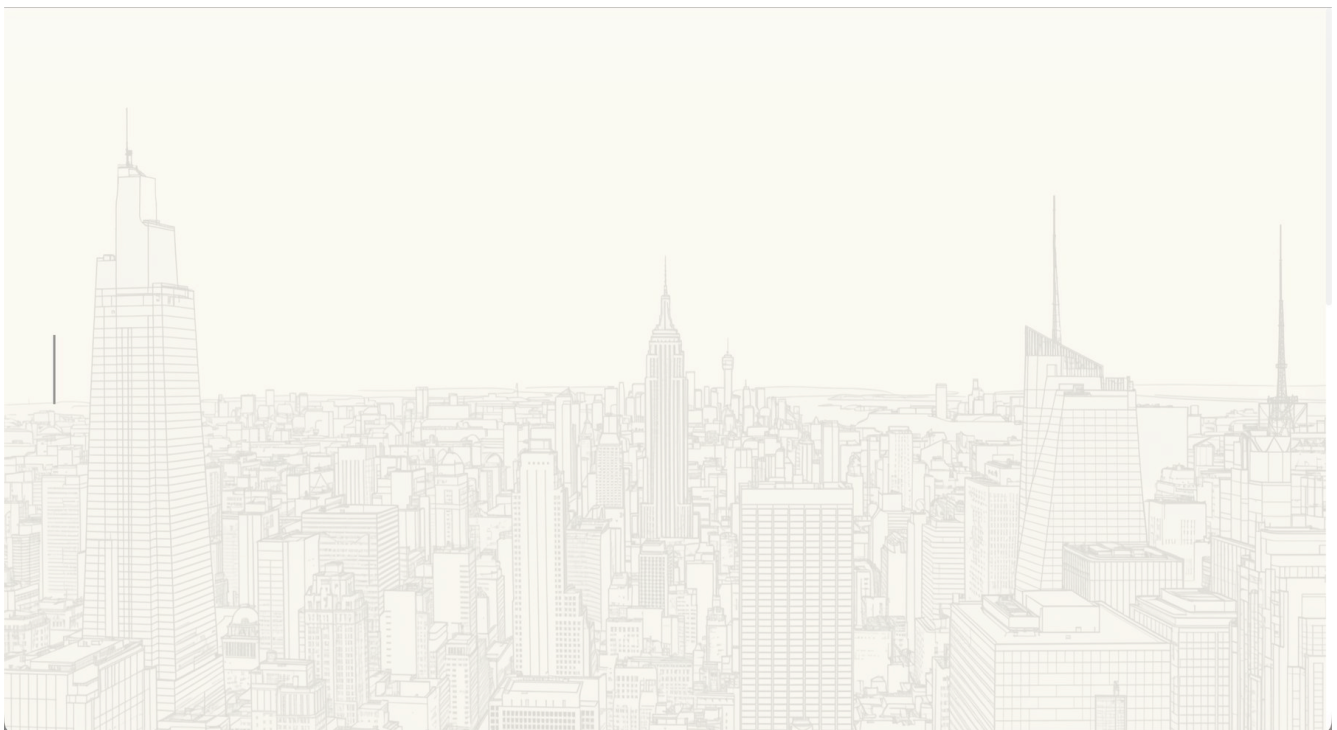

FLATIRON DISTRICT/GRAMERCY PARK/LOWER BROADWAY/UNION SQUARE

America (9 E 18th St): American, Sunday	87
Blue Smoke (116 E 27th St): Barbecue, Sunday	95
Blue Water Grill (31 Union Square W): Seafood, Sunday	95
Bolo (23 E 22nd St): Spanish, Sunday	95
Candela (116 E 16th St): American, Sunday	102
City Bakery (3 W 18 St): Bakery/cafe, Sunday	105
Craftbar (47 E 19th St): American, Sunday	107
Eleven Madison Park (11 Madison Ave): French-American, Sunday	111
Fleur de Sel (5 E 20th St): French, Sunday	114
Gramercy Tavern (42 E 20th St): American, Sunday	119
La Petite Auberge (116 Lexington Ave): French, Sunday	131
Les Halles (411 Park Ave S): French, Sunday	135
Olive's New York (W Union Square Hotel, 201 Park Ave S)

OLIVE'S NEW YORK (W Union Square Hotel, 201 E 17th St):
Continental, Sunday	144
Rolf's (281 Third Ave): German, Sunday	158
Tabla (11 Madison Ave): Indian, Sunday	166
Tocqueville (15 E 15th St): American, Sunday	169
T Salon & Emporium (11 E 20th St): Teahouse, Sunday	171
Union Square Cafe (21 E 16th St): American, Sunday	173
Veritas (43 E 20th St): Continental, Sunday	173

Persky & Campbell, Big Apple Street Smart, 1992, p. 83

Quotes drawn from this page: 80

DINING OUT

Big Apple Street Smarts: Over 6,000 restaurants are listed in Yellow Pages of the Manhattan phone book. If you ate out, two meals a day, it would take 8½ years to eat in each. By the time you finished, there would be a few thousand new restaurants and many of those you sampled would have closed their doors.

If you are on a tight budget Gray's, on the southeast corner of Broadway & 72nd St. will feed you two grilled all beef hotdogs and a fruit drink for $2. On the northwest corner of Third Ave. & 86th St., the Papaya King will serve you the same meal for $3.

Chef's change, menu's change, and one person's "fantastic" is often your "you call this food!". Try our list or listen to the last person you heard rave about a restaurant. If it's not what you had your heart set on, there are 6,000 more to try!

Restaurants open, close, and move. After you select, call to verify location, hours, dress code, reservation policy, and which, if any, credit cards are accepted.

Type Of Food Key:

AF=Afghan, AM=American, BR=Brazilian, CA=Caribbean,
CH=Chinese, CU=Cuban, DE=NY Deli
FR=French, GK=Greek, GM=German, HN=Hungarian,
IN=Indian, IT=Italian, JP=Japanese
ME=Middle Eastern, MI=Milanese, MX=Mexican,
RM=Roumanian, RS=Russian, SP=Spanish
SW=Swiss, TH=Thai, VE=Venetian

Price Range Key - most expensive item on menu.

$ = under $20.
$$ = $20-$30.
$$$ = over $30.

Big Apple smarts: With beverage, desert, tax and tip you will pay a total of between 2 and 2½ times the cost of the main course for your meal. Budget accordingly!

AF-Afghanistan Kebab House

764 Ninth Ave.

☎ 307-1612

$

AM-American

AMERICAN

9 East 18th St.

☎ 505-2110

$

Reeves, The Worldwide Guide to Movie Locations, 2001, p. 242

Quotes drawn from this page: 81

Mrs Brown

MRS BROWN (aka Her Majesty, Mrs Brown)

(1997, dir: John Madden)

Judi Dench, Billy Connolly, Antony Sher.

● ISLE OF WIGHT; SCOTLAND; WILTSHIRE

An Oscar nomination for Judi Dench as Queen Victoria in this account of her friendship with Scots ghillie John Brown. Windsor Castle is played by Wilton House, Wilton near Salisbury (see The Music Lovers for details). The Scottish scenes are at Duns Castle, about 16 miles from Berwick. The 1320 private home is not generally open to the public, except by prior arrangement (☎ 01361.883211). And it is, famously, the real Osborne House, on the Isle of Wight, to which the Queen retreats. The house, just outside East Cowes on the isle's north shore, is open to the public from March to October (☎ 01983.200022, admission charge).

MRS DOUBTFIRE

(1993, dir: Chris Columbus)

Robin Williams, Sally Field, Pierce Brosnan.

● CALIFORNIA

This coarse, sentimental comedy, which really took off at the box office, is set around San Francisco. The TV studio, where Robin Williams gets a job boxing and shipping cans, is KTVU 2 over on the East Bay. In East Bay, too, you'll find the restaurant where Williams performs his quick-change routine during two freight meals. It's Bridges Restaurant, 44 Church Street, Danville, east of Oakland. Also in the area is the Claremont Resort Hotel, Claremont Avenue at Ashby Avenue in the Tilden Regional Park area north of Berkeley. Built in 1915, the Victorian-style resort is where Mrs Doubtfire sabotages Sally Field's flirtation with charmer Pierce Brosnan. Mrs Doubtfire takes the kids to cycle and play soccer at Crispy Field, the green area on the Bay just east of the Golden Gate Bridge. She fends off a mugger on Columbus Avenue (the elegant, pale green Flatiron Building in the background is the HQ of Francis Coppola's movie empire). Williams and Field live at 2640 Steiner Street at Broadway in Pacific Heights.

The Doubtfire house: Steiner Street

MR BLANDING BUYS HIS DREAM

necticut country home (an idea rejigged in 1986 as The Money Pit, with Tom Hanks). The dream house was built on the Fox Ranch, now the 4,000-acre Malibu Creek State Park. The land was owned by film producer George Hunter, who subsequently converted the house into a ranch home. And it's still there, housing the offices of the Santa Monica Mountains Conservancy Foundation, at 3800 Solstice Canyon Road, Malibu Canyon Road between Mulholland Highway and Cold Canyon Road, in the Santa Monica Mountains above Malibu.

MISTER ROBERTS

(1955, dir: John Ford, Mervyn LeRoy)

Henry Fonda, James Cagney, Jack Lemmon.

● MIDWAY; HAWAII

Ford and Fonda, in their eighth film together, fell out over the filming of Thomas Heggen and Joshua Logan's comic-sentimental tale about WWII shipboard life. Fonda, who played the role on stage, objected to the Fordian knock-about coarsening. Ford was eventually hospitalised, to be replaced by veteran Warner Bros director LeRoy. The film was made at Midway Island in the Pacific and at the Kanoehe Marine Corps Air Station in Hawaii.

MR SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON

(1939, dir: Frank Capra)

James Stewart, Claude Rains, Jean Arthur.

● LOS ANGELES; WASHINGTON DC

Archetypal Capra little-man-against-bureaucracy fable. Mr Smith does indeed go to Washington, but only just. Most of the movie was made in LA, with some background filming in the nation's capital. James Stewart disembarks at DC's (recently restored) Union Station, Massachusetts Avenue NE, where the first building he sees is the reassuring dome of the US Capitol.

MO' BETTER BLUES

(1990, dir: Spike Lee)

Denzel Washington, Joie Lee, Wesley Snipes.

● NEW YORK CITY

Lee's New York-set film about the confused life of a jazz trumpeter, played by Denzel Washington, looks stunning. The opening shot of 'Brooklyn, 1969' was filmed on the west side of Prospect Park in the classy Park Slope area of the borough. Bleek's loft was shot on Brooklyn Heights near the waterfront, in the shadow of the Brooklyn Bridge, while Clarke's apartment is in a landmark building in the Fort Greene neighbourhood.

The Beneath the Underdog club is a composite. The interior is a studio set, but the exterior is Greenwich Village's Cherry Lane Theater, 38 Commerce Street, between Bedford and Barrow Streets, dressed as West 52nd Street in the fifties. You can also see the Cherry Lane in Woody Allen's Another Woman, Warren Beatty's Reds

MR BLANDINGS BUILDS HIS DREAM HOUSE

(1948, dir: H C Potter)

Cary Grant, Myrna Loy, Melvyn Douglas.

● LOS ANGELES

Grant and Loy are New Yorkers doing up their ideal Con-

242 and The House on Carroll Street.

Clarke works as a cashier in the jazz section of Tower Records, 692 Broadway at East Fourth Street in the Village. The birth of Bleek's son is at Harlem Hospital, 135th Street at Lenox Avenue. The brownstone stoop, where Indigo waits for Bleek, is on 141st Street between Con-

531.1

1734

0

VIEWS OF THE CORNER

The pedimented entrance

Paired Corinthian columns under a broken pediment, set into the arcaded shopfront; five storeys of segmental-arched windows above, the mansard just visible at the left.

Along Nineteenth Street

The flank running west toward Fifth Avenue — balustraded sill course, keystone window heads, and the rusticated pier that marks the join to the extension.

The second entrance

The same pedimented treatment repeated along the range, the storefront now Aritzia. Note the taller arched bay to its left.

The corner, and the mansard

"The heroic mansard roof is the feature that most often attracts attention" — the two-storey crown and its dormers, seen from East Nineteenth Street.

The Constable Building

109–111 Fifth Avenue, built for Henrietta Constable in 1893 — “fine materials, a carefully composed facade, and elegant understated detailing.”

Arnold Constable, plated

The store as a book plate: the white front, the arcaded ground storey and the mansard with its file of dormers.

